Executive Summary

Salary Required to Buy a Home in U.S. Cities
(with a 10% down payment)

The topic of housing affordability has become a nationwide conversation, and with good reason. Many would-be home buyers believe that the dream of homeownership is slipping out of their reach. Over the past decade, home prices in almost all major U.S. cities have increased. In some cases, the rise of home prices has been quite dramatic. Cities like San Francisco and Seattle have seen home price appreciation far outpace any historical precedent, growing as much as 10% year-over-year.

Meanwhile, other cities are not far behind, with cities like Denver, Miami, Las Vegas, Portland, and Los Angeles experiencing annualized home price appreciation of 8% or greater from 2011-2016. Many of the metro areas where job growth is occurring are now attracting the demographic groups who would like to buy a home, including Millennials and new families, but the cost to enter the housing market in these areas is proving too daunting for some.

At the same time, monthly rents paid by renters in most cities across the U.S. have also increased significantly, putting additional pressure on those who are trying to save up for a down payment on a home. When rental rates increase, individuals and families have a lower capacity to save up on a monthly basis towards a long-term goal of owning a home.

Salary Required to Buy a Home in U.S. Metro Areas (with a 10% down payment)

Yet another factor affecting would-be home buyers is student loan debt. With rates of post-degree indebtedness rising over the last decade, many prospective buyers must face the challenge of applying for a mortgage while seeing a large portion of their monthly income taken up by principal and interest payments on a student loan. According to the National Association of Realtors, 41% of first-time buyers said they have student loan debt in 2017, and over half said they owe at least $25,000 on their loans.

This is true for all first-time buyers, but especially true for the Millennial Generation, which is now the largest generation in the U.S., with over 80 million members. In the coming decade, this generation will make up the majority of first-time home buyers. While many of them have doubts about their ability to enter the housing market, they have not given up. Despite some claims to the contrary, this group does have a strong desire to become homeowners. According to Ellie Mae, 91% of Millennials say they intend to own a home one day.

In this report, we show that there is a wide range of housing affordability – not only between metro areas but also within metro areas. While home prices overall have increased, there remain neighborhoods in every metro area that are relatively affordable and every metro area offers solid housing options for almost all types of home buyers.

We also show that affordability is not only determined by housing prices in a given metro area but also by prevailing incomes in the area. In this report, we include for the first time an index of home affordability based on both median income data and housing price data, which we call the Unison Home Affordability Index.

By examining trends within major metro areas and differences between each area, we hope to assist prospective home buyers in identifying the right city and neighborhood for them to buy a home. The best home buyer is an educated home buyer, and education relies upon having the right data at one's fingertips.

Home Affordability in Major U.S. Metro Areas and Cities

It is common knowledge that housing prices and affordability vary greatly between U.S. metro areas and cities, but the sheer scope and range of differences between some of the biggest cities in the country – from San Diego to Phoenix to Detroit to Boston – is surprising.

The San Francisco-Oakland-Hayward metro area is the least affordable in the country, with an annual salary of $231,216 needed to buy the median home. In fact the top 3 least affordable metro areas in the U.S. can all be found in California. Taking the #2 spot on the list is the Los Angeles-Long Beach-Anaheim metro area, where residents need an income of $157,728 to buy the median home, followed by the San Diego-Carlsbad metro area, where home buyers need a salary of $139,130.

On the list of most affordable metro areas, the top spot goes to Detroit-Warren-Dearborn, where home buyers need a salary of just $35,909 to buy the median home. Following on the list are Kansas City, where a salary of $40,869 is needed, and Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater, where a salary of $43,978 is needed.

Looking only at cities, rather than metro areas, we can see the places that are the most difficult and least difficult to buy a home. In New York City proper, the required salary to buy a median home is an astounding $418,482, which makes it the least affordable city in our report. The runner up is San Francisco proper, where residents would need a salary of $349,650 to buy a median home. Well below these two, Boston is the third on the list with a required salary of $199,755.

But there are also pleasant surprises to be found in the data. For example, in Chicago city proper, the required salary to buy a median priced home is only $64,948, and in Dallas city proper, the required salary is only $48,887. In Kansas City, home buyers earning a salary of $29,036 can afford to buy a median home.

What We Can Learn from The Unison Home Affordability Index

The Unison Home Affordability Index, launched in March 2018, compares housing markets using a combination of home price data and income data. The Index shows how affordable a particular market is by estimating the number of years needed to save up in order to buy a home, given the median salary and median home price for that market.

The Index currently shows striking differences between regions of the country. In some of the hottest housing markets, our data shows that it would take more than 15 years to save up enough for a down payment to buy a home.

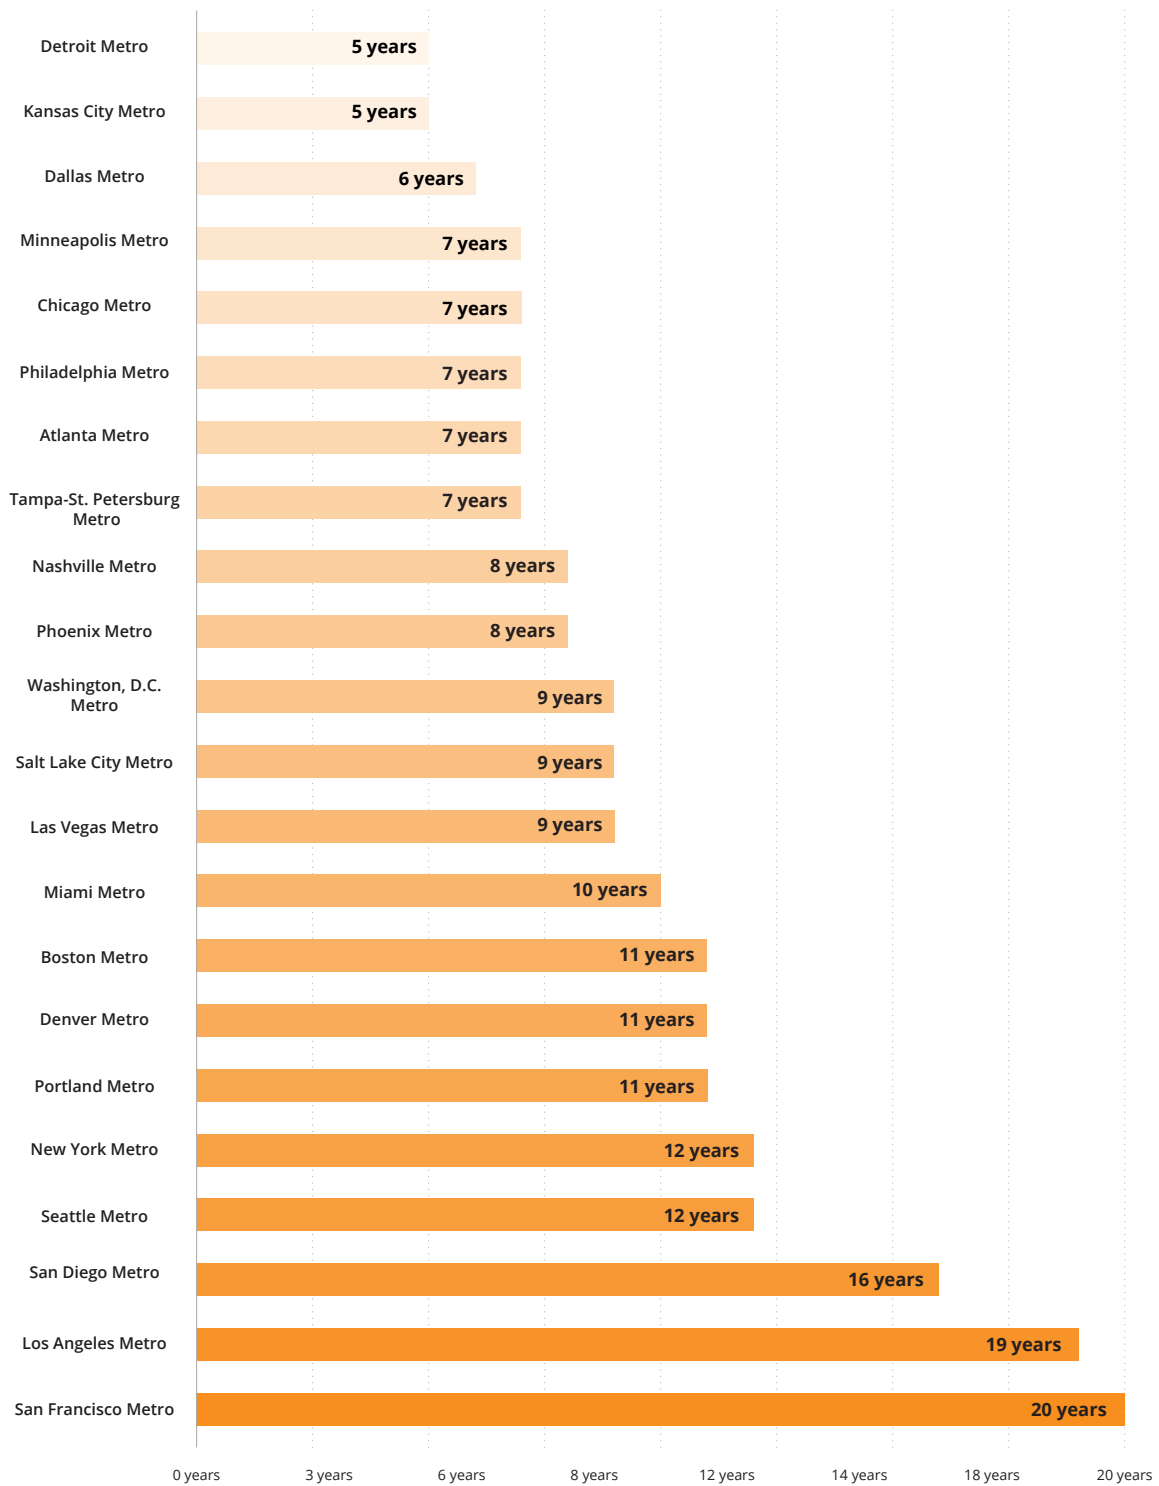

For March 2018, the top spot in the Index (i.e. the most affordable metro area) goes to Detroit-Warren-Dearborn, where a home buyer with the median income would need just 5.1 years to save up and buy the median home. As a close runner up, Kansas City metro is almost as affordable – with an Index of 5.2.

At the bottom of the list, the San Francisco-Oakland-Hayward metro has an Index of 20.4, meaning a home buyer with the median income would need over 20 years to save up and buy the median priced home. Los Angeles-Long Beach-Anaheim is a close runner up, with an Index of 19.0.

The Role of Homeownership Investments

While the housing market may look daunting to some prospective buyers, there are solutions available that can drastically increase their purchasing power and give them the opportunity to buy a home. One option is to use a homeownership investment.

Homeowners have traditionally financed their homes solely with loans. But that is now changing due to the introduction of homeownership investments – a new way to finance a home. Whereas a loan is a debt investment that produces a return to the investor by charging the homeowner interest and collecting monthly payments, a homeownership investment is financing based on partnership and shared incentives between the homeowner and the investor.

In a homeownership investment, an investor provides financing in exchange for the opportunity to share in the gain or loss in the home's value when the homeowner decides to sell their home. There are no interest charges or monthly payments on the financing provided.

A homeownership investment can double or even triple a buyer's down payment funds – from 5% to 10% or even from 5% to 20% – which can eliminate the need for costly mortgage insurance and enable them to comfortably afford the home they really want. This option gives people a way to not only buy a home but to have greater choice over important considerations like commute, school district and size of home.

Homeownership investments can be the bridge to homeownership for millions of Americans. By giving them the ability to buy a home now rather than wait several years, a homeownership investment gives these new homeowners a chance to start building equity today with their monthly mortgage payments and putting down roots in their chosen communities.

Methodology

The Unison Home Affordability Report uses recorded property data at the county or local level and automated valuation models (AVMs) to estimate the median property values in each city and zip code. The Report includes all single family residences, condos, and townhomes in each area where there are at least 50 properties.

To estimate how much income one would need to afford a home by city or neighborhood, the Report assumes a 5%, 10% or 20% down payment on the median home value. We then calculate the associated monthly costs at each down payment level, assuming a 4.625% mortgage interest rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage, property taxes of 1.25% per year on the median home value, and home insurance cost of 0.4% per year on the median home value. The required annual incomes reported are then constrained so that the monthly housing costs do not exceed 30% of gross income. This represents a conservative estimate of the percentage of income that can be spent on housing.

The Unison Home Affordability Index, launched in March 2018, compares housing markets using a combination of home price data and income data. The Index shows how affordable a particular market is by estimating the number of years needed to save up in order to buy a home, given the median salary and median home price for that market, assuming a savings rate of 5% of gross income per year.

NORTHEAST STATES

Connecticut
Delaware
Maine
Maryland
Massachusetts
New Hampshire
New Jersey
New York
Pennsylvania
Rhode Island
Vermont

The Northeast is one of the most populous and powerful regions in the world, with four major metro areas – Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C. – that include the financial capital and the political capital of the United States. People in this region are often striving to complete their higher education, take their career to the next level, catch their big break, or start a family.

It's very common to have a long commute in this region, although neighborhoods in the heart of these cities have been gentrifying for a decade or more. Home prices are high and inventory is low in many places within the Northeast, but that doesn't mean it's impossible to find a home. It just takes a little extra research and dedication.

Boston

South Boston / Back Bay / South End / Allston / East Cambridge

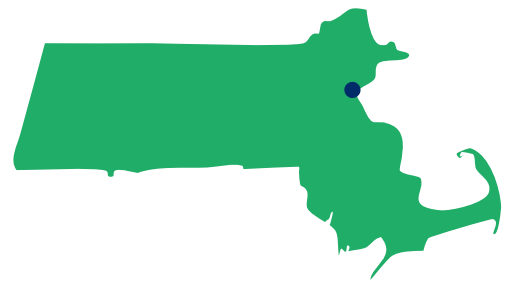

Boston is a city with an incredible history and an eye toward the future. The birthplace of the American Revolution is today as well-known for being home to the Patriots football team as being the site where American patriots kicked off the Boston Tea Party. Boston has become a thriving city, with a diverse, hard-working, and highly educated population.

With more than 20 colleges and universities in the Boston metro area, the city has become a destination not only for students pursuing an education but also for employers searching for a highly educated workforce. It has been called the “best place in the world to launch a biotech company” and is one of the top cities in the world for that industry.

The growing popularity of Boston as a place to get a degree, work, live, and start a family, has increased the demand for homes in the area.

According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, Boston has a median home value of $762,454.

Below are a few of the most interesting, affordable, and/or noteworthy neighborhoods that prospective buyers in Boston should look out for.

Down Payment	Salary Needed	Monthly Payments

Boston Neighborhoods

South Boston (02127)

A historically working class neighborhood that is still home to a Gillette factory and many other employers, South Boston is now a densely populated area with an identity all its own. While “Southie” has a reputation for being gritty, it is constantly evolving and has much to offer. These days, there are about 36,311 residents living in the area. Although you might not immediately think of beaches when considering Boston, the South Boston neighborhood has a family friendly beach at the Curley Community Center and the Seaport/South Boston Waterfront area has gone (and is currently undergoing) significant redevelopment. There are plenty of places to eat in the area, from fine dining establishments to food trucks, numerous bars, and sidewalk cafes. There is also a significant community of artists who are mostly clustered near the Fort Point district. In addition, a popular park called Castle Island offers sumptuous greenery and beautiful ocean views. Although a fair amount of gentrification has occurred here, the unique spirit of the neighborhood hasn’t changed. However, homes have gotten more expensive than they were a few years ago. Median home prices in this neighborhood run about $715,824.

Down Payment	Salary Needed	Monthly Payments
5%	$203k	$5,093
10%	$187k	$4,688

Allston (02134)

Located just a few minutes from four different institutions of higher learning – Harvard University, Boston College, Boston University, and Northeastern University – this neighborhood has more than its fair share of college students and plenty of things for them to do. It has been called one of the “Top 20 Coolest Neighborhoods in America” and it continues to live up to that designation. With quite a few bars and restaurants, nightlife here is a definite highlight. There is also a vibrant arts scene, with more than a few galleries and studios making their home here. No wonder the local motto is “It’s all in Allston.” But despite all that’s on tap here (figuratively and literally), it might not be the best place for a family to settle down. Homes in this neighborhood are a little more affordable than in some others in Boston, but still not cheap, at about $553,335. In fact, most residents in Allston actually rent rather than own (84% vs. 16%, respectively). But if you are thinking of settling down in this town, you might want to know that you’ll need a significant chunk of change.

Down Payment	Salary Needed	Monthly Payments
5%	$157k	$3,937
10%	$144k	$3,624

Back Bay (02116)

Back Bay is an urban, walkable neighborhood featuring high-rise buildings, beautiful views, historic buildings, and high-end shopping. The Prudential Center and Copley Place bring locals and tourists alike to window shop, mingle, browse, and buy at a variety of name-brand stores. Nearby in the Newbury Street District, tree-lined streets provide a backdrop to restaurants, coffee shops, and art galleries. Two beautiful churches give the residents of Back Bay a daily reminder of the area's history: Trinity Church, built in 1877, and Old South Church, built in 1873, are not only exquisite architectural specimens, but also are still in use today. About 23,000 residents call Back Bay home, and a majority of them (66%) own their homes rather than rent. However, because Back Bay has earned the distinction of one of Boston's two priciest residential neighborhoods (along with Beacon Hill), it takes a fair amount of wealth to reside here. More specifically, this charming, desirable, and quite pricey neighborhood has median home prices of about $967,853.

Down Payment	Salary Needed	Monthly Payments
5%	$275k	$6,886
10%	$253k	$6,339
20%	$212k	$5,312

East Cambridge (02141)

This area was once primarily an industrial neighborhood and the site of factories, but has now turned into a mecca for medical and technology companies, due in part to its proximity to MIT and Harvard. The industrial buildings here have been turned into residential buildings or office buildings, and these days, locals have plenty of hip restaurants and lively bars to choose from after a long day of working or studying. Walking along Cambridge Street, you could stumble upon a Portuguese bakery, a fish market, a coffee shop, or a popular bar. With its convenient location and growing list of amenities, East Cambridge has become an increasingly popular place to live and, according to 2016 estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau, has about 13,000 residents living here. An influx of people and demand for homes has resulted in higher home prices in recent years. The median value of a home in East Cambridge is about $733,776.

10%	$192k	$4,806

South End (02118)

A charming, historic, upscale neighborhood with plenty of diversity, South End offers much in terms of residential bliss, entertainment, foodie delights, and community connection. This neighborhood of about 27,664 residents is known for its Victorian row homes (in fact, this area boasts the largest, most well-maintained row of Victorian homes in the U.S.) and walkable streets, not to mention superb dining options and many locally owned shops and boutiques. Residents include people from all backgrounds, including young families, creative types, LGBTQs, as well as a small Latino community. And perhaps most salient to those readers who are currently feeling a little bit hungry – this neighborhood is known as the place for brunch. Grab a bite at one of the many eateries, from Blunch to The Beehive to South End Buttery, and you won't be disappointed. On Sundays during the Summer and Fall, locals can enjoy the SoWa Open Market, a gathering that features arts, crafts, farm-fresh produce, and food trucks. If you're thinking about buying a home in South End, you should know that it's one of Boston's pricier neighborhoods (median home prices go for about $788,762, and it's a rarity to find 1-bedroom condos for less than $400k).

New York

East Village / Greenwich Village / Park Slope, Brooklyn / Weehawken, NJ / Montclair, NJ

Ah, New York, New York – there’s nowhere else like it on the planet. This city has an energy that flows through its people and through its landscape, like none other. As Alicia Keys says, “these streets will make you feel brand new; big lights will inspire you.” The quintessential melting pot and the hub of the fashion and finance industries, New York is truly an international city with global reach.

Young people move to New York from all over the country (and the world) to catch their big break and make it in their chosen field. Many of them start out living in cramped apartments while attending school or working entry level jobs. Some of them, buoyed by the opportunities in front of them, manage to achieve their dreams.

From Brooklyn to the Bronx, New York is full of strivers and dreamers and doers. According to 2016 estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau, nearly 9 million of them! But, as everyone knows, living in this city is expensive. Very expensive. Many of the city’s residents are likely to experience some challenges as a result. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, in New York the median home price is $1.6 million.

Here are a few highlights from our report on New York neighborhoods that home buyers should know about.

New York Neighborhoods

Park Slope, Brooklyn (11215)

Rated, in 2010, by New York Magazine as the most desirable neighborhood and by Nate Silver as the most livable neighborhood, Park Slope is one of the most popular places in Brooklyn to buy a home – and one of the priciest. While many Brooklyn neighborhoods have experienced a great deal of gentrification in recent years, few have seen such a rapid transformation (and corresponding rise in home prices) as Park Slope. The neighborhood (that has a population of over 65,000 people) has excellent public schools, a low crime rate, nice parks, and enough restaurants and bars to keep its residents satisfied. In some ways, Park Slope is quintessential New York, with elegant brownstone homes sitting in a row on tranquil tree-lined streets. But in other ways, it's lacking. You won't find the diversity that New York is famous for in Park Slope, unfortunately. And you may not find the artistic, creative element that gives other neighborhoods their distinct culture, since many artists have been priced out of Park Slope. What you can count on is finding lots of strollers here; the neighborhood is known as a destination for families, despite the prevalent (and sometimes noisy) nightlife that can be found throughout this area. As you can imagine, it's not easy to buy a home here. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value in Park Slope is $2 million.

Weehawken, NJ

Across the Hudson River from Manhattan, Weehawken does not possess the glamour of the big city, but it has its own charms – and a much lower price tag for home buyers. This neighborhood of about two square miles sits on the so-called “Gold Coast” with views of the river and the New York City skyline. Residents enjoy their quieter surroundings while still having access to employers and recreation across the water. While residents must seek nightlife elsewhere, Weehawken does have a few nice restaurants and coffee shops, especially along Park Avenue. There is also a grassy park named after Alexander Hamilton (yes, that Alexander Hamilton!) who was killed in a duel right on that very spot. The population here is nearly 15,000. Many residents of Weehawken are families or weekday commuters to NYC. For home buyers, this neighborhood has newer condos right near the river and older homes along tree-lined streets further from the river. Although the homes are more affordable here, they're still not exactly cheap. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value here is $671,000.

Greenwich Village (10014)

A beloved neighborhood that borders the Hudson River adjacent to Lower Manhattan, Greenwich Village is a haven for young professionals, college students, folks from the LGBTQ community, and tourists, many of whom refer to the area as simply “The Village.” Anchored by Washington Square Park, a beautiful park where New Yorkers of all ages come to sunbathe, walk their dogs, play chess, or simply relax. College students may be running off to class at the NYU campus that’s centrally located here. On any given evening, you could leave the park and walk to a tapas bar and then to a jazz club, finally ending up in a nearby cocktail bar, illustrating just how much there is to do here. If you live here, the neighborhood can actually feel quite intimate – you can get to know your neighbors and local shop owners with ease. Many of the homes in Greenwich Village are iconic brownstones, but as you might imagine, buying a home here is not easy. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value in this neighborhood is $1.9 million.

East Village (10009)

The East Village is a small but highly desirable and increasingly unaffordable neighborhood just North of Lower Manhattan. It has a quintessential “New York cool” vibe, with more hip coffee shops, bars, book stores, and boutiques than you could possibly visit in a single day. Here within East Village, one can find the well-known neighborhoods known as Alphabet City, Bowery, and Little Ukraine. East Village residents, including many NYU students, enjoy the nearby Tompkins Square Park, where you can walk amongst the elm trees, unwind, and take in the fresh air. You can also walk or run along the footpath bordering the East River, which offers beautiful views. While the sun is out, the East Village is relatively relaxed, but when the sun goes down, the neighborhood comes to life as friends meet up at bars after work or grab a bite to eat. The diversity of cuisines available in this area can hardly be matched anywhere, and residents don’t hesitate to take advantage. But of course, nothing great in New York comes cheaply. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value in the East Village is a whopping $1.5 million.

Montclair, NJ

While technically not in New York, Montclair is a township that is just a “short” 30-minute commute away from Manhattan, and for that reason it’s become a popular spot for people looking for more affordable homes and a different type of lifestyle than can be found in NYC. As of 2016, there were about 38,130 people who live here, some of whom have been drawn in by the area’s historic architecture (Montclair is home to six historic districts that are listed on the New Jersey and the United States Register of Historic Places). Montclair has been called an “urban suburb” with plenty of walkable areas, including Upper Montclair, where you can get ice cream and take a break in Anderson Park, and Church Street, where you can grab a bite to eat, get some work done in a coffee shop, or do your grocery shopping at Whole Foods. There are good schools here, and it’s not hard to see why the area attracts plenty of families – including those moving out of New York City. There are many tree-lined streets in Montclair with homes that appeal to these ex-city dwellers. With that said, it still costs a pretty penny to live here. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value in Montclair is $633,000.

Philadelphia

Fishtown / Rittenhouse Square/Logan Square / Mt. Airy / Graduate Hospital/Point Breeze / University City

The “city of brotherly love” is feeling a lot more love lately after their hometown Eagles won the 2018 Super Bowl. In early February, millions of Philadelphians flocked to the downtown area for their first ever Super Bowl victory parade.

But this diverse and vibrant city has a remarkable history with far greater milestones than any sporting event – not to mention countless historical landmarks going all the way back to the founding of the country. In 1787, the Constitutional Convention was held at Pennsylvania State House, where the Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution were drafted and ratified by the founding fathers, including Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson. Today, visitors can still visit this very same building, now called Independence Hall, and can visit the famous Liberty Bell which once hung in its top tower.

For tourists and locals alike, the historical significance of this city is just one reason to fall in love with it. Philadelphia, which is the largest city in the state, boasts a wide variety of restaurants, bars, music venues, museums, and coffee shops. And of course, who could visit Philadelphia without eating one of its famous namesake cheesesteaks? Yum! For these reasons and others, the city has been gaining favor with home buyers looking for an affordable place to live on the East Coast. Philadelphia is now home to about 1.5 million people (according to 2016 U.S. Census Bureau estimates), whose average annual salary is just over $50k.

According to Unison’s Home Affordability Report, the median home price in Philadelphia is $142,864.

University City (19104)

The University City neighborhood is home to six colleges (universities) – hence the University name. It is anchored by two large private universities, the University of Pennsylvania (UPenn) and Drexel University. Between the two of them, they enroll about 50,000 students in total, which accounts for the majority of the population in this area while school is in session. University City went through major reconstruction and redevelopment efforts in the 1950s, all of which made it the bustling area that it is today, with a population of about 54,890. University City is an ethnically and economically diverse neighborhood with residents of all ages and many different backgrounds. This is reflected in the types of restaurants and shops that call University City home. Thanks to the preponderance of students here, University City is almost more well-known for nightlife than for its great schools. Food trucks and farmers markets can be found here almost year-round, and there are plenty of parks and public hangout spots too. The Porch at 30th Street Station is a great outdoor area for dining, walking, or meeting up with friends. University City is also a very affordable neighborhood for home buyers, where they can find median home prices of about $144,391.

Rittenhouse Square/ Logan Square (19103)

This area is packed with history! More specifically, Rittenhouse Square has the distinction of being one of five original squares developed by William Penn (the founder of the state of Pennsylvania) in the late 1600s. It is now one of the most desirable (and expensive) areas within the region. The 19103 zip code is now home to about 22,911 people (according to U.S. Census Bureau's 2016 estimates). Those who choose to live here likely value the amenities that they get in exchange for living in one of the more expensive places in the area. First and foremost among the benefits of living here is convenience – the neighborhood is literally right in the center of the action. If you work downtown, the commute from here will likely be less than 15 minutes. Not only is work nearby, but so is nature. The Rittenhouse Square Park (known as “The Square”) is a lovely park that’s perfect for a leisurely stroll, a quick bike ride, a bit of exercise, or a few hours of sitting and reading a book. If you have extra money to spend, you might enjoy visiting a few of the luxury stores and high-end boutiques found throughout this neighborhood. As you might expect, homes are not cheap here (median price is about $523,394), but they are still more affordable than in, say, New York.

Fishtown (19125)

Fishtown is an area located just northeast of downtown Philadelphia (only 8 minutes on the El to city center!) that got its name from the region's previous role as the hub of the commercial shad fishing industry back in the day. It's a historically working-class area that has been becoming more popular among many different types of people in recent years. Fishtown has been called "Philadelphia's Brooklyn," and it lives up to the nickname. Locals here flock to popular hangout spots like Johnny Brenda's and unique eateries like Fette Sau, a barbecue restaurant whose sister location is in – you guessed it – Brooklyn. Just a few blocks away lies The Fillmore, a music venue where nationally known acts perform year round. Fishtown is a popular hangout spot for young people who live and work in Philadelphia. With a population of nearly 17,000 people, Fishtown is definitely an "up and coming" area. While this neighborhood has become more in demand over the last few years, its housing is still relatively affordable compared to other major East Coast cities. Fishtown's median home value is about $217,436.

Mt. Airy (19119)

Located in North Philadelphia, Mt. Airy is a popular neighborhood for families and individuals who choose a more suburban lifestyle. It's also attractive to those who work in downtown Philly and want to escape to a more tranquil place after leaving the office. In the 1700s, Mt. Airy was a popular resort spot, where the wealthy citizens of Philadelphia would spend their summers. It retains some of that feeling today. You can stroll through Mt. Airy's downtown and stop for coffee or brunch. There are plenty of art galleries as well as restaurants and cafes with seating outdoors during the summer months. In the fall, Tuesday nights are reserved for a popular street faire and roads are closed in the downtown area, allowing tourists and locals alike to mingle and sit down for a relaxing dinner. Mt. Airy has attracted many new residents in recent years and now claims a population of nearly 30,000 residents. Today, home buyers in Mt. Airy pay, on average, about $239,374 for their homes.

In 2015, the Graduate Hospital neighborhood was named as the hottest neighborhood in Philadelphia by Redfin. It offers a short commute to those who work at UPenn, Drexel University, or the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and the proximity of this neighborhood to Center City is one of its main selling points. But it also has beautiful tree-lined streets and a solid list of affordable restaurants and bars within walking distance. The boardwalk along the Schuylkill River gives residents an outdoor escape to enjoy on a weekend or an evening after work. Although homes in this area are a bit more expensive than the median home for around Philadelphia, they can still be within reach of many families and individuals at a median value of about $191,460.

Washington, D.C

Adams Morgan / Georgetown / Anacostia /
Arlington, VA / Hyattsville, MD

Washington, D.C. has often been called the “Capital of the Free World” because it is home to the immensely powerful United States government. But locals here usually just call it “DC” or “the district.”

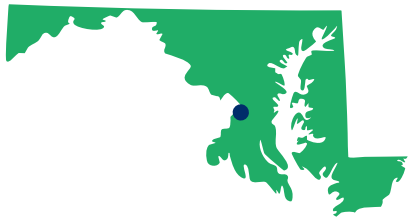

Being the center of political activity in the U.S. means that this city is shaped by people from all over the country who move here to work as congressional aides, lobbyists, policy analysts, reporters, elected officials, bureaucrats, organizers, etc. But just because this is a politically-active city doesn’t mean that everyone here is involved in politics. There are also many D.C. residents who don’t interact with government in their daily lives – unless the presidential motorcade blocks their morning commute to work.

The city also draws college students from across the nation (and the world) due its many top-tier universities, including Georgetown, George Washington University, American University, and Howard University. Due in part to the many people who move to D.C. from elsewhere, it is one of the most diverse cities in the country. There is a wonderful mix of cultures here, including many recent immigrants.

For locals and tourists alike, it’s difficult to be bored in this city. There are countless museums throughout Washington, D.C., including the Smithsonian, the National Air and Space Museum, the National Museum of Natural History, and many more. Residents and visitors also get to enjoy the Potomac River and the famous cherry blossoms along its shores.

It probably comes as no surprise that living in Washington, D.C. is relatively expensive. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home price in this area is $593,000.

Anacostia (20020)

Anacostia has been called the “last affordable neighborhood in D.C.” and while that could be changing soon, it’s still worth checking out. Located in Southeast D.C. just minutes from the Capitol Building and the National Mall, Anacostia was one of the city’s earliest suburbs. Anacostia is a historically black community that today has an abundance of cultural and recreational activities for residents and visitors alike. The Anacostia Community Museum offers visitors a chance to explore the history and culture of urban neighborhoods from Washington, D.C. to South America and other places across the globe. A few minutes away is the National Historic Site that preserves the last home of Frederick Douglass, the great American abolitionist, writer, and statesman. In addition to historic and cultural landmarks, there are wonderful restaurants, coffee shops, art galleries, and bike trails sprinkled throughout this neighborhood, which was named “2016 Neighborhood of the Year” by Curbed DC. As this area draws more attention, the homes here – including historic row houses and turn-of-the-century Victorians – are becoming more expensive. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home price here is $397,000.

Georgetown (20007)

Anchored by the Georgetown University campus and bordering the waterfront, this neighborhood is highly desirable not just to college students but to people of all ages. During the academic year, almost 20,000 students live here, but there is much more to Georgetown than just the college. The main thoroughfare, called “M Street,” is known as one of the best (and priciest) shopping destinations on the East Coast. You can find boutiques and national retail stores of all kinds along this street, not to mention quite a few delicious bakeries and restaurants. The entire neighborhood has an old-time feel, as the cobblestone streets and federal townhouses recall an earlier time in American history. Over the years, this neighborhood has been home to such notable people as Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Graham Bell, John F. Kennedy, and Julia Child. Georgetown’s population is small (at under 30,000 people), and is reserved for a select population who get to live in this neighborhood that, in its entirety, has the distinction of being a National Historic Landmark District. As you might imagine, Georgetown remains one of the most expensive neighborhoods in Washington, D.C. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home price here is $948,000.

Adams Morgan (20009)

This neighborhood has a youthful, fun-loving vibe and exceptional diversity. Not only is there a flourishing nightlife here, with bars aplenty and restaurants open late, but there is much to do during the day as well. On any given day, residents can grab a coffee (served with animal crackers) at Tryst, arguably the most popular cafe in the neighborhood, stroll along the wide sidewalks, browse a few boutiques such as Urban Dwell, enjoy a meal on the balcony at Roofers Union while looking out over the city, and finally catch a live band or DJ playing at Songbyrd Music House. But all of that is just one aspect of this famous neighborhood, which also contains historic row homes on (relatively) quiet side streets. Home to just over 50,000 people who make a median average of nearly $100k per year (per household), Adams Morgan is a popular location for homeownership. Those who wish to live here should be prepared to open up their wallet, however. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home price in Adams Morgan is $596,000.

Arlington, VA

This suburb in Virginia is just across the river from Washington, D.C., which means it's the perfect place for commuters who want to find more affordable homes and families looking for a little more space to settle down in. Fortunately for the residents of this small city, it has a lot to offer. There are walkable areas, such as Clarendon Boulevard, which has restaurants, coffee shops, department stores, boutiques, and more. On Sundays, the Westover Farmers Market has fresh produce, live music, and open sidewalks perfect for mingling. Residents can also make use of many public trails for hiking and biking, such as the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad Trail. Arlington is also the home of the U.S. Department of Defense Headquarters (aka The Pentagon), where over 25,000 military and civilian employees go to work each day. But perhaps most importantly, this area has convenient access to Washington D.C. and all that it has to offer in terms of employment and recreation. ## Hyattsville, MD

Another suburb of D.C., this small city is located to the West – in Maryland. With its siren song of more affordable home prices and a more tranquil lifestyle, it welcomes in those escaping the crowded D.C. downtown. Although Hyattsville is close to the big city, it retains a small town feel. Residents know each other, and (almost) everything you could wish for is within a short driving distance. You could say it combines the best of urban and suburban, with yearly bike races, easy access to public transportation, diverse people (and food), weekly farmers markets, art studios, and good schools. There are great restaurants here, like the popular Busboys and Poets, not to mention a Whole Foods grocery store. It's a haven for new parents and growing families. Home buyers can find Victorians and 1920s bungalows and plenty of other types of homes here. But the best part is the price – a lot lower than what you would pay anywhere in downtown D.C. # Atlanta

Midtown / Peachtree Heights West /
Ormewood Park/Glenwood Park / Sandy Springs

If contemporary Southern hospitality within a cosmopolitan environment is what you're after, you'd do right to give the city of Atlanta a look. Georgia's state capital and one of the country's fastest-growing major metropolitan regions in the U.S., Atlanta is an exciting place to live and work.

Particularly in recent years, Atlanta has become a booming regional center for the growing and increasingly prosperous American South. It is quickly becoming a notable central hub for culture and commerce, with many top chefs and dining establishments in town, along with world renowned theaters, exciting tourist destinations, and a centralized area for transportation options. In addition, Atlanta is home to vital regional headquarters for many large corporations (Coca-Cola, Delta, Home Depot, UPS, CNN, and Bellsouth, to name just a few) and boasts one of the highest rates of job growth in the country. All of this in close proximity to the state's natural areas of beauty makes Atlanta a particularly desirable "city in a forest."

Growth and economic opportunities have incentivized people to flock to Atlanta in recent years. According to 2016 estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau, about 450,000 people (with a median age of 34 years) call Atlanta home. Atlanta residents are fortunate to be able to experience all four seasons, with hot and humid summers and moderate winters. In the warmer months, residents can soak in the sun at the many outdoor parks scattered throughout town. Compared to other cities, Atlanta residential real estate is a relative bargain. The median home value here is $236,065.

Peachtree Heights West (30305)

Located east of Peachtree Road in Buckhead and just a few miles north of downtown Atlanta, Peachtree Heights West is a charming, organized community in a very desirable location, set amidst rolling hills with tree-lined streets and beautiful craftsman homes. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places since 1980, the Peachtree Heights West neighborhood offers historic homes that have been in high demand for quite some time. In addition, the neighborhood boasts limitless shopping, dining, and entertainment options and is just down the road from the Lindbergh MARTA station, offering easily accessible public transportation. Although Peachtree Heights West has a popular main street area, the overall setting for this neighborhood is quiet and peaceful. Residents here report feeling comfortable walking the Peachtree Heights West streets and getting to know their neighbors (often through community activities such as neighborhood parties, picnics, and sponsored park cleanup events). But buying a slice of Peachtree Heights West charm will cost you. Current median home prices in this neighborhood run on the high side, at about $542,179.

Sandy Springs is an affordable city located about 14 miles north of downtown Atlanta. At a hefty population of about 102,212 (as of 2016), Sandy Springs is the second largest city in the metropolitan Atlanta area and the sixth largest city in the state of Georgia. Sandy Springs is home to large employers, such as IBM, Cisco Systems, and United Parcel Service, and residents are an equal mix of families and singletons. Sandy Springs is also the location for many popular annual events and festivals, sixteen parks and greenspaces, and close proximity to the Chattahoochee River. In addition, there are many weekend farmers' markets in the spring, summer, and fall, along with lots of shop, restaurants, and movie theatres. Houses in Sandy Springs tend to be surrounded by lush foliage, making it one of the prettiest neighborhoods in Atlanta that also provides ample privacy, cleaner air, and shade. Sandy Springs is a very family-oriented community with well-known prestigious private schools and top-rated public schools. Sandy Springs is also close to many Jewish synagogues and Hebrew schools. If you choose to live in Sandy Springs, you'll probably want to make sure you have a car. MARTA does service the area, but to a lesser degree than in the Atlanta city limits. Home values in Sandy Springs average about $381,626.

Midtown (30309)

With co-working spaces springing up throughout this Atlanta neighborhood and new public transportation stations like MARTA, nearby. Midtown Atlanta is lively with commerce, culture, and community. Midtown is the second largest business district in Atlanta having a population of about 23,000 people and welcoming about 6 million visitors per year. Midtown (aka Atlanta's "Heart of the Arts") is the center of the arts scene in the city. It's home to the Fox Theatre, High Museum of Art, and the inventive world of the Center for Puppetry Arts. Located less than a mile north of Centennial Olympic Park, Midtown is also in no short supply of parks and livability. Here in Midtown, residents and tourists alike enjoy Piedmont Park, with its ample paths for cycling and walking, and Peachtree Street, a walkable stretch of the city along the Midtown Mile. And when the sun goes down, Midtown turns up the volume with nightclubs, lounges, and music venues. From Opera Nightclub to Sutra Lounge, dancing doesn't stop here until the sun comes up. This area is also home to a number of popular cultural festivals, including the Atlanta Arts Festival, the Festival Peachtree Latino (the Southeast's largest multicultural festival), and the Atlanta Pride Festival. Clearly, residents of Midtown Atlanta have much to keep them entertained. And the demand for such entertainment keeps coming. There has been an influx of residents to this area over recent years, and new buildings seem to be popping up at a rapid pace to keep in line with residential demand. Home prices are on the increase as well. Median home values here now run about $323,688.

Ormewood Park/ Glenwood Park (30316)

Settled between two of Atlanta's historic parks – Grant Park and the East Atlanta Village – is the neighborhood of Ormewood Park/Glenwood Park, where one can find yearlong shade thanks to the many mature oaks and lush evergreens. Ormewood Park is a sleepy little hamlet primarily populated by historically intact, single-family Craftsman-style homes and brick bungalows constructed around the 1920s. The neighborhood is a great example of "new urbanism," designed to promote a sense of community through the development/use of a small town square, common green spaces, a community pool and gym, and retail and dining options. The Ormewood Park/Glenwood Park area is also a great place to partake in some satisfying sweets at a number of enticing gourmet ice cream, cupcake, and coffee house establishments. A neighborly community made up of young professionals and families, Ormewood Park/Glenwood Park is an attractive location to raise a family. In less than a decade, new and larger homes of varying architectural styles have been erected here. Home values here have held steady for the time being. However, they are expected to rise when the nearby portion of the Atlanta BeltLine is completed. So, perhaps the time to buy is now! # Nashville

Franklin / Brentwood /
Murfreesboro / Lebanon

Most people probably can't think about Nashville, Tennessee without thinking about country music. Although it's home to so much more, Nashville is world renowned for being the music recording and production headquarters for country music and many other musical genres. Many music record labels have their offices in Nashville, primarily in an area called "Music Row."

Nashville is the capital of Tennessee and offers a great deal more than just country music. A plethora of cultural attractions, family activities, and business opportunities can be found in this region, particularly in the downtown and central business districts. In addition, Nashville is home to Vanderbilt University and offers all of the usual excitement of a college town. Civil War history is also a big draw for folks interested in learning about sites such as the Battle of Nashville, the Battle of Franklin, and the Battle of Stones River.

Nashville has proven itself to be a major economic player in recent years. Although the music industry plays a significant role in the area's economy and many tourists flock to this area, the largest industry in the region is actually healthcare. Over 300 hundred healthcare companies are located in Nashville, and the industry contributes about $30 billion per year and 200,000 jobs annually to this region. According to Forbes, Nashville had the third fastest growing economy in 2017, and Zillow named the city as the "hottest housing market in America."

According to the United States Census 2016 estimates, the total consolidated city-county population of this area was 684,410. The current median value for housing in Nashville is $269,084.

Murfreesboro is a city located about 40 miles from Nashville and has the distinction of being the exact geographic center of the state of Tennessee. Currently, many think of Murfreesboro as one of the most rapidly growing cities in the country. It offers a number of amazing monuments, local and national parks, and greenways, including Cannonsburgh Village, which gives visitors a view into what a working pioneer village from the 1830s to 1930s would have looked like. The Oaklands Historic House Museum is also housed in Murfreesboro, where it was renovated into a museum from its previous life as a 19th-century mansion during the Civil War. Murfreesboro is also home to the largest undergraduate university in Tennessee: Middle Tennessee State University. The university has a student population of over 20,000 students and employs over 2,000 people. As of 2016, Murfreesboro had a population of about 131,947, whose median annual income was $53,241 per the 2016 U.S. Census. The median home value in Murfreesboro is $213,336.

Franklin

Franklin is a city located about 21 miles south of Nashville that has been experiencing significant population growth in recent years. In fact, it's now the seventh-largest city in the state and its current population of over 65,000 shows great influx into the city based on its population of only 12,407 in 1980. Downtown Franklin offers an exciting mix of historic preservation and upscale offerings, including boutiques, galleries, restaurants, retail stores, and antique shops, along with beautiful historic homes. The area is also home to a number of annual street festivals, including the Main Street Festival that gathers together more than 200 artists, musicians, and chefs to the historic Franklin Square and Downtown District. Franklin also hosts a Wine Festival, Pumpkinfest, and "Dickens of Christmas," a celebration in mid-December that brings nearly 50,000 people to the area. The unemployment rate was only 2% as of September 2017. In fact, many have chosen to locate to Franklin because of booming business in the area. And business is booming here. Coolsprings Galleria – a huge retail center with over 1 million square feet of spaces – is the largest employer in the city, employing over 3,500 people. In addition, as is the case with Nashville, Franklin is home to many healthcare companies that have provided careers for thousands of Franklin residents. Home values in Franklin average about $439,924.

Lebanon

Lebanon is a smaller city about 25 miles east of Nashville’s city center, sometimes referred to as “Cedar City” because of its density of cedar trees in the region. Its estimated population as of 2016 was 32,372 people. Residents of Lebanon may likely spend their well-earned money at the local Cracker Barrel, the “down-home” family-oriented restaurant chain that has its corporate headquarters here in Lebanon. After grabbing some grub, residents may be found whooping it up at the annual Wilson County Fair, which has been ranked by the Busy Bee Trader Magazine as the “Best County Fair in Tennessee.” For a small town, Lebanon offers a good amount of not-to-be-missed opportunities, including a number of fine dining options, outdoor activities, and cultural performances. Residents in Lebanon are slightly more likely to rent their homes than to own (56% vs. 44%, respectively). Those who buy a home today pay on average $218,648 for their home.

Brentwood

Like Franklin, Brentwood has been known primarily as being a major suburb of Nashville. Brentwood was incorporated as a city back in 1969 and quickly entered into a prolonged phase of substantial development and growth. These days, one of Brentwood’s biggest claims to fame is that it’s one of the wealthiest cities per capita in the United States. Many of the celebrities who are known to reside in Nashville (like Garth Brooks and Dolly Parton) actually live here in Brentwood. Why do the wealthy flock to the city of Brentwood? It could be because the main high school in the area is ranked among the best in the state (boasting a whopping 96% graduation rate). Or it could be for the beautiful green, rolling hills that surround the city. Or perhaps for its many well-maintained parks, its swanky restaurants, its top notch hotels, or its upscale retail spaces. It could also be for the good, old fashioned Southern hospitality that remains prominent in this historic region. Most likely, it’s a combination of all of the above. The 2016 U.S. Census estimates that the median household income for Brentwood residents was about $148,340 (about three times higher than the state’s median), and only about 2% of the population falls below the poverty line. Brentwood’s median housing value is $579,981.

Tampa / St. Petersburg

Tampa / St. Petersburg / Clearwater

Tampa / St. Petersburg is a metro area in Florida that surrounds Tampa Bay. The area offers an eclectic mix of architectural delights, beach communities, cultural opportunities, exciting nightlife, high-end shopping, urban living, and many waterfront activities. Tampa / St. Petersburg is particularly well known for its warm, beautiful blue ocean and gulf waters, and the miles and miles of natural beauty provided by the area’s barrier islands. The subtropical climate in this area makes for hot, humid summers that are often highlighted by thunderstorms and warm, sunny winters that make the rest of the country envious. In fact, the year-round high temperatures and warm, sunny beaches are often the primary draws for visitors and locals alike.

The Tampa / St. Petersburg area offers world-class entertainment and dining options, as well as many cultural opportunities and sporting events (Tampa is home to three professional sports teams). The area’s major international airport (Tampa International Airport) is located 7 miles from downtown Tampa Bay and has brought in many new residents from around the world.

According to estimates from the U.S. Census, the area is now home to over 3 million people, making it the second largest metro area in Florida. It boasts a bustling economy that is well supported, in part, by a strong financial industry within the region. The median income among households in the metro area is $48,248 and the median home value is $167,862.

Tampa / St. Petersburg Neighborhoods

Tampa

The city of Tampa is, of course, the largest city in this metro area and is the third largest city within the state of Florida, with a population of nearly 400,000 as of 2016. Its unique combination of lazy, sunny beaches and big city opportunities make it a primary destination for people around the world. Tampa is also recognized for its long history of manufacturing and enjoyment of Cuban-style cigars, particularly within the Ybor City neighborhood. Tampa has a strong reputation as a fun, desirable city to live, work, and play. In 2015, Money Magazine ranked Tampa as the “best big city to live in” within the Southeastern U.S. and Forbes rated it as America’s best “outdoor city.” That might help explain why most residents in Tampa have come from some other region within the U.S. – most likely somewhere with less desirable weather. About 35% of the population here is over 55 years old, and almost half are between 18 and 54 years old. According to the 2012-2016 American Community Survey, nearly two-thirds of the Tampa population aged 16 or older are in the workforce, and the median household income in Tampa is $45,874 according to 2016 U.S. Census estimates. ## Clearwater

Clearwater is the third (and smallest) city in this metro area. Fun fact - it is home to the Church of Scientology headquarters. In fact, the organization owns the largest building in town, called the Flag Building. People come from far and wide to visit Clearwater largely because of the city's predominance of sandy shores. The city is situated northwest of both Tampa and St. Petersburg, and is bounded by Tampa Bay to the southeast and the Gulf of Mexico to the west. Many locals and visitors here spend time at Pier 60, where they can watch outdoor movies, live music, and street performers...all for free! Once named the “Top Beach Town in Florida” by USA Today, Clearwater is now home to about 114,361 people and a large variety of neighborhoods. One of these areas is known as the Cleveland District, a region that has experienced major renovations and development over the past few years and is currently a booming combination of commercial, entertainment, cultural, and residential properties. Folks living in Clearwater bring in median annual household incomes of about $44,569 per 2016 U.S. Census estimates. The median home value is a very affordable $156,618.

St. Petersburg

Where do you go if you want sunshine year round? Why, St. Petersburg, of course! St. Petersburg has the renowned claim to fame as the city with the Guinness World Record of the most consecutive days – 768! – of sunshine. St. Petersburg might be very attractive to folks who want to find their place in the sun, given that it averages about 361 days of sunshine per year. St. Petersburg (also affectionately referred to as “St. Pete”) is slightly smaller than its Tampa neighbor, though it’s still no small city. Just under 300,000 people make up its residential population, and St. Petersburg follows Tampa as the most populated city in the area. Incoming residents often point to the great weather, low cost of living, and perfect atmosphere for retirement as the primary drivers of their migration to the city. There really is a bit of everything for folks living in St. Petersburg. The city contains more than 100 neighborhoods from the central business district to the downtown area to dozens of historic areas near the bay. The downtown area displays major high-rise buildings, museums, cultural sites, and parks, along with venues for two professional sports teams: the Tampa Bay Rays and the Tampa Bay Rowdies. For those interested in looking to buy a home in St. Petersburg, they may be in for a nice surprise. The median home value in this area is $169,182, quite a bit lower than in other major cities in the country.

Miami

Coconut Grove / Little Havana /
Coral Gables / South Beach

Miami’s reputation for sun-soaked sandy beaches, Latin beats, and urban multiculturalism has earned it the nickname of the “Magic City.” Miami is a major hub of culture, entertainment, tourism, finance, commerce, and trade. It is home to over 300 high-rise buildings and boasts the third tallest skyline in the U.S. Miami is a major tourist destination, ranked only behind New York City for its number of international visitors annually. People from around the world are drawn to Miami for many reasons. Way up at the top of that list are the city’s miles and miles of beautiful beaches, world renowned restaurants serving global cuisines, lively festivals, year-round warm weather, and some of the most famous nightclubs in the world.

At a population of approximately 5.5 million people, Miami’s metropolitan region is the fourth largest urban area and the eighth most populated area in the U.S. As of 2010, Miami itself was home to 399,457 residents and 158,317 households, according to Census data, and the median age of those living here was almost 39 years old. Miami is an incredibly diverse area. About one-third (34%) of the population are Cuban, and 19% are of African ancestry. Over half of Miami’s population is foreign born, mostly from Latin America.

According to 2012-2016 American Community Survey, the average household income for people living in Miami is $31,642, and about one-third of Miami residents own their own homes. The median value of homes in Miami is $279,837.

Coconut Grove (33133)

If history and nightlife are what you're looking for, Coconut Grove is your place. Coconut Grove (established in 1825 and now often referred to as "Coco Grove" or simply "The Grove") is one of Miami's oldest neighborhoods and offers an exciting variety of historic buildings, homes, and estates. The narrow, winding roads in this neighborhood are lined with sheltering trees that provide a sense of classic beauty. In fact, Coconut Grove is one of the greenest areas within the region. Coconut Grove is on the southern side of Miami and is home to City Hall, the Coconut Grove Playhouse, CocoWalk (an upscale shopping center), and the Coconut Grove Convention Center, along with bars, restaurants, vintage shops, open-air malls, and nightclubs as well as many gardens and parks. The neighborhood is also home to many outdoor events, including the popular Coconut Grove Arts Festival. Many come to this area for its energetic, lively nightlife, which is particularly popular among college students from nearby University of Miami and Florida International University. The population of Coconut Grove is divided between the northeast and southwest sections of the neighborhood. Together, they include nearly 26,000 people (with a median household income of $77,865) and represent a mix of singles, young families, and retired folks. ## Little Havana (33125)

Little Havana is an iconic neighborhood located within the already exceptional Miami metropolitan region. Little Havana is situated just west of downtown Miami and offers some of the most significant Cuban culture in the area. It's particularly known for its famous Calle Ocho strip, the main street in the neighborhood that's packed with many, world renowned Cuban (and non-Cuban!) restaurants, along with incredible cultural and artistic opportunities. There is a great variety of some of the most popular bars and nightclubs in Miami. Little Havana can also boast about the Calle Ocho Festival – a lively street party that provides a celebration of Latino culture – and Maximo Gomez Park – a site where older residents gather to play dominoes and swap stories. Little Havana is also home to the South River Drive Historic District, which is on the National Park Service's National Register of Historic Places. As of 2010, Little Havana was home to 76,163 residents, 85% of whom were Latino. Homes cost, on average, $247,460 in this neighborhood.

Coral Gables (33146)

Coral Gables is a large, tree-lined community on the coast that is located almost 7 miles southwest of downtown Miami and about 4 miles from the Miami International Airport. The University of Miami is located in Coral Gables, making this area at least partly a college town. Coral Gables also houses a number of famous landmarks including the Miami Biltmore Hotel (a luxury hotel showcasing brilliant Mediterranean architecture), the Venetian Pool (a historic public swimming pool), and Douglas Entrance (a historic site that was built at a cost of a million dollars in 1924). Known by some as the “City Beautiful,” Coral Gables draws people in due to its over 140 restaurants, gourmet shops, and retailers. Coral Gables has a population of over 50,000 people and 13 distinct neighborhoods. Median household incomes in this area are just over $90k, with most working residents in white-collar jobs. There are many homes (well, more like estates) here that are valued higher than the average in the state and the country. However, less-expensive houses and condos can also be found in this area. Taken together, these homes combine to make Coral Gable’s median housing value about $571,225.

South Beach (33139)

South Beach (also known as “SoBe”) is a neighborhood about 7 miles east of downtown Miami, located on the barrier island between the Atlantic and downtown. South Beach actually used to be farmland that was developed starting in the 1910s. Although it experienced significant devastation due to the 1926 Great Miami hurricane, it now boasts a booming economy, high level of tourism, and exciting people-watching opportunities. It is now home to about 40,000 residents. Like so many neighborhoods in the Miami area, South Beach offers visitors and locals an abundance of restaurants, bars, nightclubs, boutiques, hotels, parks, and beaches. South Beach has tended to draw in residents who are young professionals, singles, young couples, and celebrities, and the area has become a mecca for the LGBT community. # Dallas

Lower Greenville / Plano /
Old East Dallas / Arlington

They say everything is bigger in Texas and, in some ways, that is very true. Take the Dallas–Fort Worth metro area, for example. It’s the fourth most populous metro area in the United States, with 7.2 million residents (according to 2016 U.S. Census Bureau estimates), 3.6 million jobs (according to January 2017 Texas Workforce Commission figures), and 22 Fortune 500 companies. This region has been quickly on the rise in terms of population over recent years. In fact, in 2016, Dallas-Ft. Worth ranked #1 in the U.S. for year-over-year population growth.

Dallas proper has a population of about 1.3 million, ranking as the ninth largest city in the U.S. From 2010 to 2016, it had the distinction of being the city with the greatest domestic migration, compared to all other U.S. cities. The city hosts the headquarters of nine Fortune 500 companies and exhibits notable continued economic development and growth. Dallas is also home to more shopping centers per capita than any other U.S. city. So, yes, Dallas is big. But the uniqueness of the city is that it still has neighborhoods that feel small. Along with the high-rise buildings and the hordes of people, Dallas offers a small-town feel and quiet, suburban living. You can find the big city lights and the hustle and bustle of business, but also the dusty main streets and the corner drugstores. It’s a mix of the old and the new, the traditional and the innovative. Perhaps it is this combination that’s bringing waves of young professionals, young families, and Millennials to the area. The median home value in Dallas is $186,597.

Lower Greenville (75206)

Lower Greenville is a thriving area of Dallas that provides a plethora of entertainment options, including many restaurants, bars, and live music venues (including the famous Granada Theater – originally a cinema, now a very popular place to watch live music). In the past few years, Dallas’ creative class have transformed Lower Greenville into one of the city’s top stops for inventive, one-of-a-kind restaurants, cocktail bars, and a growing, independent shopping and retail scene that eschews big chains. Despite the refurbishment, Lower Greenville has maintained its casual, rough-around-the-edges vibe and has become the go-to HQ for Dallas’ young, up-and-coming chefs (along with a high concentration of yogis and artists). Lower Greenville is a proudly diverse area, where the rich and not-so-rich live side by side. Artists, accountants, lawyers, and retail clerks all live and party together. Whether it be porch parties, block parties, National Night Out, Wine Walk, St. Patrick’s Day parade – there is some type of large-scale neighborhood event going on every other month. Unlike other parts of car-centric Dallas, Lower Greenville is a pedestrian-friendly, close-knit community of residents who can walk to their favorite restaurants bars and shopping. Lower Greenville is located in northeast Dallas, filled with charming residential streets lined with craftsman-style houses, and, as of 2016, had a population of 38,559 people (who, on average, experience commute times of about 25 minutes). Almost 50 percent of the neighborhood’s homes are detached, single-family houses from the 1950s – old homes with distinct character. Median home values in Lower Greenville run about $415,269.

Old East Dallas is an area that definitely does not lack old world charm and character. It has a population of just under 38,000, with an assembly of beautiful historic districts and prominent neighborhood groups. Alongside picturesque streets filled with high-end restaurants, bars, and retail spaces, 125 years of construction has brought to this area an extraordinary collection of home styles, from stately old Swiss Avenue to the redevelopment of garden apartments along Gaston Avenue and Live Oak Street. The personality of Old East Dallas centers on its historic districts, each with its own distinctive mixture of houses and an equally amazing variety of neighbors. Swiss Avenue (part of the exclusive Munger Place development that first opened in 1905) was Dallas' first historic district. Today, its mile-long landscaped median serves as a place where an endless parade of baby strollers, bikes, dogs, joggers, and walkers pass by the impressive homes daily. The Midwest often does not get the attention it deserves, but it has a wide variety of cities and neighborhoods for home buyers to choose from. Chicago is a vibrant city with a strong economy, world-class universities, and incredible cuisines. Even with all it has to offer, the city still has lots of neighborhoods with affordable homes compared to elsewhere in the U.S. The city of Detroit was deeply affected by the previous housing market crash, but it has already turned the corner and is poised to once again become an important hub of commerce and recreation. Minneapolis and Kansas City are highly underrated cities with good jobs, good quality of life, and most importantly, very affordable homes. For anyone looking to move to a new city, it's a no brainer to consider living in the Midwest.

Detroit

Sherwood Forest / Corktown/North Corktown
/ University District / Bloomfield Hills

Detroit is home to about 700,000 people, making it the most populated city in Michigan. Perhaps most well known for being the historic headquarters of the global automobile production, Detroit has seen its fortunes fall and rise over the last decade.

The 2008 recession and ongoing industry-wide trends hit the automobile industry hard and resulted in automobile plant closings and significant employee layoffs. With the economy faltering, Detroit was left with a declining population, a rising unemployment rate, and a glut of unfilled housing.

But today, Detroit, aka “Motown” or “the Motor City,” is on the rise again. The empty homes are being purchased, renovated, and occupied. Home prices are going up again, and businesses and people are eager to come back to be a part of the city’s future.

Redevelopment efforts are giving overlooked areas of the city new life and Detroit’s population has begun increasing again, particularly within the downtown and midtown neighborhoods. Young people, singles, families, and professionals have been arriving and coming back to live, work, and play in Detroit. People are coming for the affordable cost of living and staying for Detroit’s up-and-coming nightlife, thriving music scene and above-average walkability. With new businesses arriving and bringing new jobs, and with home prices still low, this is a great city to move to today. According to the Unison’s Home Affordability Report, the median home price in this city is only $31,787, although it should be noted that some homes here are in need of major repairs.

Quicken Loans recently built a massive, 66,000 square-foot office building in Corktown, which some see as a sign of even bigger things to come for this neighborhood. Also recently, the Detroit Police Athletic League broke ground on a new headquarters and youth sports facility on the site of the old Tiger Stadium in Corktown. In Corktown, there are plenty of places to enjoy a nice lunch or dinner or meet friends for nightcap. ## Sherwood Forest / University District (48221)

First planned in 1917, the Sherwood Forest neighborhood got its name from Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire, England (where the famous Robin Hood stories took place). In 2002, the Detroit-based Sherwood Forest neighborhood was named a Historic District, and the area is now known for a wide array of local amenities and services as well as its architecturally well-maintained homes from the 1920s and 1930s, its windy, peaceful tree-lined streets, and its strong community. Right next door lies the University District neighborhood, which gets its name from the nearby University of Detroit Mercy. The area is home to many college students and has several gay and lesbian bars and nightclubs. Bordered by Livernois Avenue (aka “Gallery Row”) on the west, this area also boasts a high concentration of art galleries and offerings. There are a number of outdoor recreational facilities, cultural venues, theaters, and libraries here. Properties here are predominantly 1920s- and 1930s-era single family homes that represent a variety of architectural styles, especially Tudor. Chicago is the third most populated city in the U.S., with nearly 3 million residents as of 2016. It’s one of the most visited cities in the world, and had a record 54 million domestic and international visitors in 2016. But that’s no surprise given the number of exciting destinations that this city offers. From the Art Institute of Chicago to the Sears Tower to the Museum of Science and Industry and more, Chicago has something to delight tourists and residents of all types and ages.

Chicago also boasts some of the best universities in the world, with the likes of Northwestern University, the University of Chicago, and the University of Illinois at Chicago.

This city also has an incredibly diversified economy and is an international leader in finance, commerce, industry, technology, and telecommunications. Locals and tourists alike love food options here. From deep dish pizza to the Chicago-style hot dog, to classic Chicago barbecue, you can’t get out of this city without having a great meal.

Although home prices and sales within the city of Chicago have been increasing, it’s been at a slower rate compared to other major U.S. cities. This makes the housing market in Chicago full of great opportunities for those looking to buy. According to Unison’s Home Affordability Report, the median price for a home in Chicago is $247,902.

Chicago Neighborhoods

Printer's Row/Central Station (60605)

An urban neighborhood located just south of downtown Chicago, Printing House Row (or Printer's Row) received its name from its origin as an area that housed many printing and publishing warehouses in the late nineteenth century. The renovation of these buildings into today's residential lofts now make it a hip and trendy neighborhood that draws in young professionals from near and far. The area is now known for its artsy and eclectic vibe, along with its strong community ties and identity. Booksellers and readers from all over the region flock into Printer's Row for its annual Literary Festival (or "Lit Fest") held here every year since 1984. Visitors and residents also enjoy one of this region's most treasured historical landmarks: Dearborn Station – a railway station that opened in 1885 and provided the primary departure point for passenger trains heading West. The station has been converted into retail and office space, but still provides a bit of nostalgia for those interested in local history. This is an exciting area to live if you want to be on the cusp of all things hip, urban, and intellectual. About two-thirds of the area's residents rent their homes.

Magnificent Mile (60611)

The Magnificent Mile (aka "The Mag Mile") is one of the big draws in Chicago for residents and non-residents alike. The Mag Mile consists of about 13-blocks of high-end real estate from Chicago River to Oak Street on the Near North Side of the city. Since earning its nickname in the 1940s, the Mag Mile has remained steady as the city's largest shopping and dining district, with some of the most expensive rental prices in the nation. Historic landmarks abound along the Magnificent Mile and include such favorites as the John Hancock Center, the Wrigley Building, Tribune Tower, and the Chicago Water Tower. Living along the Mag Mile puts its residents just about as close to the center of the action as they can get. With amazing access to luxury and convenience, Mag Mile residents have as much shopping, dining, bar hopping, and pet walking that they can possibly endure. And when they tire of that, they have museums, and theaters, and festivals galore.

Logan Square (60647)

Do you fashion yourself a hipster? Would you like to? If so, Logan Square may be the place for you. Logan Square is one of the trendiest neighborhoods in the Chicago area at the moment. It's located on the northwest side of Chicago and centers around – you guessed it – an actual town square. The area is packed with affordable dining options, cool cafes, farmers markets, bars, brew pubs, and lounges. It is also lively with cultural, artistic, and musical vibes. At any time of the year, you can find galleries filled with work created by local artists and concerts or street festivals buzzing with music from local bands. The Logan Square neighborhood is home to Chicago's "Emerald Necklace" – a huge network of interconnected parks and greenways that sit alongside the area's architecturally magnificent historic mansions and churches. Logan Park is home to diverse groups of people that have created strong communities within the neighborhood. They have worked together to create many trails, development projects, historic preservation efforts, and a number of other sustainable and green projects in an effort to protect and enhance the Logan Park area. At just over 70,000 residents and growing, Logan Park is an attractive option for new and repeat home buyers.

Wicker Park (60622)

Wicker Park has its fair share of hipsters as well. In fact, it was named by Forbes in 2012 as the "#4 hippest hipster neighborhood in the country." Like Logan Square, Wicker Park is known for its edgy, trendy assortment of cafes, bars/pubs, nightlife, and dining scene. Home to about 26,000 residents, Wicker Park is a 4-acre historic district that's listed on Chicago's National Register of Historic Places and provides a number of popular outdoor gathering spots for residents and non-residents alike. It's conveniently located for commute into downtown Chicago via "The Loop" (Chicago's major mode of public transportation) and has undergone a significant process of gentrification over recent years. The area is now home to many highly educated young adults, and the median household income here is on the high side at nearly $80k.

Minneapolis

North Loop/Warehouse District, Minneapolis / Cathedral Hill, St. Paul / Highland Park, St. Paul

The Minneapolis/St. Paul metro area offers much more to its residents and visitors than just blisteringly cold winters. The area attracts people with its big-city amenities and its welcoming, Midwestern vibe. The two separate cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul each offer their own, unique neighborhoods and communities.

St. Paul – the state capitol – has a distinctively historic feel associated with its residential homes, government offices, and museums. Minneapolis, which is located about 12 miles west of St. Paul, has developed an enticing mix of old and new with its well-maintained historic architecture and its modern high-rise buildings, alongside a multitude of dining and cultural offerings. Modern Minneapolis is a hot spot for culture, design, food, and fun. It’s the center of a vibrant music and cultural scene and home to the world renowned Guthrie Theater and First Avenue nightclub. And when the winter nights (and days!) gets too cold to go bar and nightclub hopping, the climate-controlled skyways that have been built all around the city provide a welcoming network for getting around the area. Population estimates from 2016 show a population of about 404,670 people in Minneapolis earning a median household income of $67,989.

The population within both Minneapolis and St. Paul are relatively young, at a median age of 31 years. It’s likely that the many family-friendly options and activities in the area are proving to be a big draw for this cohort. They may also be enticed by the affordability of homes in the area, as well. According to Unison’s Home Affordability Report, in Minneapolis proper, the median home price is at a very affordable $239,756.

North Loop/ Warehouse District, Minneapolis (55401)

Although it originated as the city's shipping hub, Minneapolis' North Loop has become increasingly popular among Millennials in recent years. Home to what is known as "The Warehouse District," the North Loop neighborhood brings people in from near and far to partake in its many craft beer brew pubs, hip coffee shops, independent restaurants, trendy shopping spaces, and bustling bars and nightclubs nestled in the area's historic buildings. The North Loop has been featured in many "Best Of" lists for great living in Minneapolis and is thought by many to be one of the must-see Minneapolis neighborhoods. Updated commercial spaces and residential areas have been renovated and have sprung out of the district's old factories and warehouses, creating an edgy, urban vibe that's attractive to many of the incoming residents. In fact, since the 1990s, this area has seen an influx of thousands of people, especially those enticed by the area's close proximity to downtown Minneapolis. With the rush of residents comes, of course, higher prices. According to Unison's Home Affordability Report, the median home price in the North Loop neighborhood is on the somewhat pricey side at about $320,115.

Cathedral Hill, St. Paul (55102)

One of the most elegant neighborhoods in the Minneapolis/St. Paul metro area, Cathedral Hill was once home (and party central) to F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald. In fact, visitors to the area can still see the lodging that Mr. Fitzgerald described as a "house below the average on a street above the average." Contemporary Cathedral Hill (now listed on the National Register of Historic Places) is filled with beautiful, classic, architecturally wondrous Victorian houses as well as the Commodore Bar & Restaurant (a favorite of F. Scott Fitzgerald in the 1930s that now provides visitors the opportunity to step back into time). The Cathedral Hill neighborhood contains many subterranean shops, quiet little pocket parks, and twinkle-lit patios. The stunning historic homes here provide a sense of previous times that were somehow grander, without a high price tag. The median home value in Cathedral Hill is $218,151.

Kansas City

Westport / Brookside / Crossroads / Kearney

Downtown Kansas City has gone through notable redevelopment in recent years, at a cost of more than $6 billion. The results have been significant, with population figures now four times what they were just 10 years ago. More specifically, there are about 30,000 people now living in the downtown area (up from about 4,000 in the early 2000s). The influx of residents (particularly Millennials) into the city has brought a thriving music, arts, and culinary community that finds strong connections with venues such as the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art, the Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art, the Kauffman Center for the Performing Arts, and the Kansas City Art Institute. Opportunities for children are plentiful in the area as well, and popular destinations include LegoLand, the Sea Life Aquarium, and the Kansas City Zoo.

Residents in the area point to great job opportunities, low cost of living, and exciting cultural offerings as reasons for their migration into the area. However, while cost of living for many daily needs and activities are lower than other major cities, housing prices in Kansas City are definitely on the rise and demand is high. According to data from The Associated Press, there are nearly 14% fewer homes available to potential home buyers in Kansas

City than there were just one year ago (compared to 5% fewer nationwide). Furthermore, since 2012, the city has experienced a 55% decrease in home availability, indicating that Kansas City is one of the most sought after housing markets in the country. Despite all of that, this city remains one of the most affordable in the country, with the current median home price in the city at about $110,827.

Westport (64111)

Westport is located about 3 miles southwest of downtown Kansas City and has the distinction of being one of the oldest neighborhoods in the area. The area was originally called West Port due to its location as the most western located village where settlers prepared for their journey into Kansas. Westport is now one of the area's most popular places to find entertainment, dining, bar-hopping, and shopping opportunities as well as residential bliss. Nightlife is a big focus in Westport, where many come to experience the live music scene, to watch a movie or comedy show, or to indulge in some great food at one of the many highly sought after restaurants in the area. Westport's commercial and residential areas are sprinkled with tree-lined streets, historic buildings, and colorfully painted homes. The history and charm of this neighborhood are what bring a lot folks in to call the area home. According to U.S. Census Bureau estimates, the population of Westport as of 2016 was about 17,507. The median age of Westport residents is approximately 34, and their median household income is $42,758 per 2016 U.S. Census estimates. The median home value in this area is $144,360.

Brookside (64113)

The Brookside region of the Kansas City area is home to a collection of thriving and eclectic neighborhoods and districts. Often thought of as a neighborhood in and of itself, Brookside is located in close proximity to midtown and downtown Kansas City. Brookside offers residents and tourists a plethora of cultural, dining, and shopping opportunities, along with popular annual festivals such as The Art Fair, The Trolley Run, and the St Patrick's Day Warm-up Parade. The Art Fair has been a staple within the area for more than 20 years and draws in artists from near and far to display artistic treasures from a wide range of mediums. In general, Brookside prides itself on its family-friendly vibe, its neighborhood charm, and its ease of daily living. Parks, greenways, and trails dot the community, where the housing market is in high demand, and the median home price is about $254,886.

Crossroads (64108)

Crossroads is an historic neighborhood that has experienced a great deal of redevelopment over the past few years, attracting artists of all kinds as well as a young, working professional population to the region. Also known as the Crossroads Arts District, this area used to be considered part of midtown Kansas City because of its close proximity – just two streets away – from downtown. Crossroads is now THE place to go for a thriving mixture of visual arts offerings and live music performances. There are more than 60 art galleries located in Crossroads, many of which open their doors for the neighborhood’s popular First Fridays events. The Crossroads Music Festival has been held annually since 2005 and features live music, films, art, and carnival games. This area is also home to one of the largest and most intact examples of a Film Row District: buildings that used to house major movie studios such as MGM, Warner Brothers, and Paramount. The neighborhood also includes an eclectic mix of boutiques, small businesses, funky restaurants, and creative studios, housed within numerous beautiful buildings that are listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Many folks have been drawn to the area in recent years because it offers so much in terms of entertainment and nightlife, along with residential opportunities that are still affordable. ## Kearney

A bit farther away from Kansas City is the small town of Kearney. Kearney is located about 24 miles northeast of Kansas City and has an estimated population of approximately 9,259. It’s been quickly growing over recent years (it’s currently one of the fastest growing cities in the state) and has been putting a great amount of resources into development of both commercial and residential zones. Because of these efforts, the city now offers plenty of opportunities for casual and upscale dining, recreational activities, and convenience stores. It’s a great area for families due to its high quality schools and low crime rates. It tends to be a quiet community with highly-educated residents who are focused on providing a safe environment and quality education for their children. One of the city’s most striking claims to fame is that it’s the birthplace of Jesse James. In fact, if you’re lucky enough to be in Kearney during the month of September, you could have the opportunity to celebrate this infamous American outlaw during the Jesse James Festival that’s been held annually in the town for almost 50 years. Kearney’s residents are, on average, about 34 years old, and the median household income in this area is $69,010 per year according to the 2016 U.S. Census. The West is “where it’s at” according to people who live in this region. Seattle and the San Francisco Bay Area have become hubs of the technology industry and they could both lay claim to being the “tech capital of the world.” Like these two cities, Denver, Portland, and Salt Lake City are increasingly becoming appealing locations for rapidly-growing, innovative, technology companies. Throughout this region, residents appreciate their proximity to the outdoors and take every opportunity to enjoy the nice weather – skiing in Denver and Salt Lake City, hiking and sailing in San Francisco and Seattle, and biking, well, everywhere. The only downside is that home prices in this region have seen a dizzying increase in recent years, particularly in Seattle and San Francisco. But that doesn’t mean home buyers can’t find what they’re looking for.

Seattle

Seattle, Washington is often called the Pacific Northwest’s “Emerald City” due to the lush greenery that surrounds the city and its many waterways. Seattle boasts a population of over 700,000 people and a staggering 139 neighborhoods, making it the largest community in the state and largest in the Pacific Northwest region. Seattle is a popular destination due to its world renowned restaurants, culture, coffee, natural beauty, and easy access to mountains and snow sports. Seattle has been known for many years for its relentless rainfall (though, with an average of about 155 days of measurable rain per year, this is perhaps overstated). However, the city is probably now more recognized as “Amazon Central” due to the rapidly expanding offices of Amazon’s Headquarters in the South Lake Union area of the city.

Capitol Hill (98102)

Capitol Hill is a trendy, urban neighborhood, centrally located for easy access to many Seattle neighborhoods (including Amazon's headquarters in South Lake Union). The area is highly desirable for its eclectic mix of shops, restaurants, and diversity of people. Just east of downtown, Capitol Hill is made up of vibrant, urban streets and venues that gave rise to the grunge rock movement in the 1980s and continue to cater to people of all ages looking for night-life adventure. Many people who live here either bus or walk to work (29% and 30%, respectively), putting this area in the 99th percentile of all U.S. neighborhoods for those forms of commuting. Capitol Hill is packed full of people! This neighborhood is in the 95th percentile of population density, and the vacancy here is only 1.3% (significantly lower than in other U.S. neighborhoods). This suggests that the demand for housing in this area is much higher than the supply, which has likely led to the increasing housing costs that this area has experienced over the past few years. # Portland

Pearl District / Sellwood-Moreland/Creston-Kenilworth /
 Alberta Arts District / Multnomah

The common refrain among residents of this city is “keep Portland weird!” The slogan actually originated in the city of Austin but has since been co-opted by Portland and is now heavily debated among those who live in this often proudly eccentric city. But what exactly does the slogan mean? It’s hard to say, but we can assume it has something to do with being different, unique, and original. Sure, the town is home to the smallest park in the world, the most strip clubs per capita in the U.S., the World Naked Bike Ride, Voodoo Doughnuts (where the bacon maple donut was invented), and the annual Adult Soap Box Derby. And yes, many eccentricities of this city have been popularized by the hit TV series “Portlandia,” but there is so much more to this city than this concept of “weird” which has taken center stage.

Portland is a thriving, outdoor-oriented, hipster-filled, tech-focused, urban, and laid-back city that is home to many independent, creative people and businesses. It’s filled with museums, art galleries, and thriving sports teams and is home to more people with academic degrees than the national average. It’s a place where you can visit Powell’s Bookstore, reportedly the largest independent new and used bookstore in the world, and then take in an independent movie after grabbing a craft beer and some delicious sushi. Portland’s proximity to nature also makes it a favorite among outdoor enthusiasts and those who wish to escape from the city to get a breath of fresh air. The city’s increasing popularity has resulted in steadily rising home prices. The median home price in Portland is $496,328.

Alberta Arts District (97211)

For anyone interested in counterculture art and lifestyle, the Alberta Arts District is a good fit. This neighborhood is located in northeast Portland and is centered around the 20-block stretch of Alberta Street. Historically an African-American community, this area today maintains a diverse population of all races and all types of people, including bohemians, and artists. It is filled with funky art galleries, independently owned boutiques, coffee shops, and restaurants that exist within a lively arts community. It is especially well known for the big street festival that takes place here on every Last Thursday of the month. People come from all over the city to partake in the lively celebration of art, food, and community all along Alberta Street and within its commercial spaces. The Alberta Rose Theatre is another big draw to this area. The theater was originally built in 1927 and has since been renovated into an exciting music, comedy, and vaudeville venue that allows its patrons to wine and dine while they indulge in a little culture. Major redevelopment efforts that have been underway in the Alberta Arts District since the 1990s have resulted in notable population increases and rapidly rising property values. Multnomah is a neighborhood in southwest Portland that gets attention mostly for its charming, quaint village of the same name. Established in the 1910s, Multnomah is home to a small, sweet Main Street area that consists of many boutiques, sidewalk cafes, small retail shops, dining establishments, and bars/pubs. People flock to the village for "Multnomah Days" – a popular annual street festival and parade that is held every August. Multnomah is also home to Gabriel Park, a large public area that consists of sports fields, picnic areas, a large skatepark, and a dog walking area. Multnomah residents live in a wide range of houses – some architecturally stunning, beautiful homes and some quite functional and minimal. The median cost of owning a home here is $550,987.

San Francisco

Mission/Bernal Heights / Sunset /
Daly City / Walnut Creek / Berkeley

If one city has embodied the staggering increase of California home prices this decade, it's San Francisco. The City by the Bay has drawn in tourists at a rapid rate for many years due to all of the excitement and individuality that it offers. Within the 47 square miles that encompass Coit Tower, Pier 39, Fisherman's Wharf, FiDi, SoMa, Chinatown, cable cars, and (sometimes) Karl the Fog, residents have seen a historic runup of home prices.

In recent years, some people have flocked to get on board this "rocket ship" before it's too late, while others have waited for it to come back down to earth. According to 2016 estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau, San Francisco is home to about 850,282 residents. It ranks second in terms of population density, right behind the tightly packed New York City. San Francisco is a uniquely diverse city with about 48% Caucasians, 33% Asians, 6% African Americans, and 15% Hispanics/Latinos (according to the 2010 census).

The city offers so much to so many and, as a result, there has been a great influx into the area, filling up the city itself and its surrounding neighborhoods. According to Unison's Home Affordability Report, in San Francisco proper, the median home price is an eye-popping $1.3 million. But it's not just the City by the Bay experiencing a dizzying rise in home prices. The entire Bay Area, from Walnut Creek to San Jose to Palo Alto has witnessed the phenomenon. Below, we look at the data to show you a few of the popular, interesting, and potentially affordable neighborhoods in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Mission/Bernal Heights (94110)

In this city, “the Mission” is synonymous with Millennials, hip coffee shops, gentrification, Google Buses, worldly cuisines, a variety of movie theaters, and late nights. But it’s so much more than that. There are longtime residents who give the neighborhood its unique character and longstanding establishments that have withstood the waves of change sweeping over the city. Although this area has experienced significant gentrification over recent years, it remains a particularly diverse neighborhood, and the community here has deep, Hispanic/Latino roots. The area offers a small-town feel within the big city that draw in people from around the world. In fact, the area’s popularity has been steadily on the rise over the past few years, and the real estate market is responding accordingly. In other words, if you’d like to buy a home in this neighborhood, it will cost you. The median home value is $1.5 million.

Sunset (94122)

On the West side of the city, the Sunset District has the distinction of being the largest neighborhood in San Francisco. It provides residents with refreshing ocean breezes, proximity to parks and coffee shops, and a quiet environment suitable for families. The neighborhood is divided up in three parts: Inner, Central, and Outer, each of which combine to provide homes to over 85,000 people. The Sunset District is also home to the famous San Francisco Zoo, the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, and Stern Grove (an amphitheater that hosts a popular annual summer festival). Like many of the neighborhoods within and around San Francisco, the Sunset District has experienced significant growth in recent years. Some of the allure has been its relative affordability. However, while this neighborhood is not the most expensive in the area, it’s still quite pricey. The median home value is $1.4 million.

Daly City

Daly City may be the latest up and coming neighborhood in the Bay Area. The Daly City neighborhood lies immediately to the south of San Francisco and presents a more affordable option for those who are being priced out of the city center. Even better, it offers parks, farmers markets, quiet streets, and a fairly short commute on BART into downtown San Francisco. As of 2016, about 105,543 people call Daly City home, where the median household income is about $79,346 according to 2016 U.S. Census estimates. An ethnically diverse area, Daly City provides a suburban vibe within close proximity to all that San Francisco has to offer. Median home prices in Daly City hover around $868,904, which may not seem affordable compared to most other cities in the U.S. but might be seen as a bargain here.

Walnut Creek

What was once a sleepy suburb in the East Bay, about 25 miles outside of San Francisco, has now become a popular locale for shopping, fine dining, and doing business. The city of Walnut Creek has attracted families of all kinds, as well as daily commuters who make their trek into San Francisco on BART each morning. It has drawn many folks in because of its easy access to highways running in all directions, and keeps people's interest because of its many options for entertainment, dining, recreation activities, and community. Another bonus that residents get in this area is open space. Yes, with so many people flocking into the Bay Area, simple open space is a hot commodity. Walnut Creek has the distinction of owning the most open space (per capita) compared to any other neighborhood in California. This means that residents and visitors alike have the luxury of taking a deep breath, a few minutes of downtime, and a stroll along the many parks and recreation areas in this region. However, those who chose to stay in this area and settle down with a home will still see some high prices. The median home value in this area is about $781,018.

Berkeley

Going back to the political and social upheavals of the 1960s, Berkeley has been a city with a strong social and civic identity and today is still frequently the site of protests and marches. Home to the first campus of the University of California system (UC Berkeley, or "Cal"), Berkeley is a world-renowned city famous for its quirky culture, walkable downtown, and eclectic dining options. The city is dotted with a wide variety of cafes and coffee houses, where students may spend the entire day with one cup of coffee and a stack of textbooks. After a full day of prepping for exams, students may be found biking the hills of Tilden Park or perusing the variety of funky used bookstores in town, many of which can be found on the ever-famous Telegraph Avenue. A stroll down Telegraph Avenue on any day will provide a plenty of opportunities for people-watching, from locals to tourists to tie-dyed artisans selling their wares. What more could you ask for? Well, lower home prices perhaps. With all that this city has to offer, buying a home here doesn't come cheap. In fact, the median home price in Berkeley is whopping $1.2 million.

Salt Lake City

Downtown / Central City /
The Avenues / Sugar House

Salt Lake City is perhaps best known as the central location for people of the Mormon faith. In fact, the city was developed in 1847 by Brigham Young, a leader of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Today, sixty percent of the population of this city identifies as Mormon, many of whom regularly visit the stunning Salt Lake Temple. Even those residents who are not members of the church can take in impressive performances by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir in Temple Square.

Of course, there is more to this city than being a religious hub. Salt Lake City is the capital of Utah, with a population of about 191,446 in the city proper, according to 2016 U.S. Census Bureau estimates, and about 2.3 million people in the metro area. The city offers its residents an abundance of natural beauty, outdoor activities, professional sports teams, and culture/entertainment options. The site of the 2002 Winter Olympics, Salt Lake City is particularly well known for its world-class ski resorts, beautiful national parks, and 900+ acres of public parks. The city is also home to many museums, performing arts venues, and family-friendly activities and is particularly well known for hosting the Sundance

Film Festival every January, the largest independent film festival in the U.S. Salt Lake City was #10 on Forbes list of America’s fastest growing cities in 2017. The median income here is about $50,353. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median home value is $298,779.

Downtown (84101)

Downtown Salt Lake City is an historic area of the city that provides dynamic urban living for those who call it home. This neighborhood offers close proximity to cultural landmarks, art galleries, festivals, nightlife, and outdoor adventures, with many activities within short walking distances. The lively Downtown Farmers Market is a staple among the locals, and City Creek Center (containing 725,000 square feet of retail, office, and residential space alongside a full-service grocery store) has wowed residents and non-residents alike since March of 2012. Many people choose to live downtown to be close to their jobs in the big city. In fact, young professionals and college students make up a large percentage of this area's population. Most of the homes here are condos, many of which have been renovated from historic buildings in the area. Home prices tend to be on the high side, but still reasonable – the median price for a home in the downtown area is $304,779.

Central City (84102)

There is so much to see and do in Salt Lake City's largest neighborhood: Central City. From Trolley Square shopping to Liberty Park recreation, Central City offers just the right mix of urban and residential. Trolley Square is a massive shopping center that was renovated from the location's original function: a central space for SLC's trolley cars. Liberty Park is an 80-acre green space that is packed full of breathtaking views of nature, alongside tennis courts, a running track, bird exhibits, and playground equipment. Central City is also home to great dining establishments, high-end boutiques, historical landmarks, and bars/pubs/lounges. One particularly sought-after area is the 9th and 9th District which is a small, eclectic, quirky neighborhood located just east of Liberty Park. The 9th and 9th neighborhood is particularly well known for its 9th and 9th Street Festival, an annual event hosted by residents that typically includes over 100 artist and vendor booths and brings in visitors from near and far. Many residents say that they live in Central City because of its proximity to downtown, minus the downtown prices. The population is made up largely of single people who are young professionals, college students, and recent college graduates. The median value for a home in this area is $276,301.

Sugar House is another one of Salt Lake City's oldest neighborhoods that offers old-world charm at affordable prices. What was originally established in 1853, named for a sugar beet factory, and housed Utah's first state prison is now one of Salt Lake City's best spots for hipsters, artists, and upper-middle class homeowners. The area is especially known for its world class shopping. Seemingly whatever can be bought will be found in Sugar House, including books, clothing, furniture, art, and bicycles, to name just a few. You can also find a great variety of restaurants and bars here, many of which will happily keep you up until the wee hours of the night. Speaking of late nights, Sugar House is also home to a good number of college students. Westminster College, the small, private, liberal arts college that's also located in the neighborhood, brings along with it approximately 1,500 students to the area. Congress Park / South Park Hill /
Platt Park / Stapleton

Denver is one of the nation’s most rapidly expanding major cities whose 2016 estimated population of 693,060 places it in the top 20 most populous cities in the United States. Named by U.S. News & World Report in 2016 as the best place to live in the U.S., Denver has drawn in many residents who hail from other regions. In fact, the area experienced a huge influx of people between the years of 2010 and 2014, giving rise to a population that is now generally politically liberal, makes an average salary of $72,017 per year, is fairly young (median age of 36), and skews single.

Denver (known as the “Mile High City”) boasts a one-mile elevation above sea level, making it the highest major city in the U.S. However, Denver is not exactly what one might think of as a “mountain town,” given that it takes at least an hour to get to the Rockies from the city center. But its location at the base of the Rocky Mountains provides a gateway to a whole host of outdoor activities, particularly for skiers and snowboarders. Snowy white mountain adventures and abundant natural beauty are draws for visitors and locals alike. Denver is home to more than 5,000 acres of parks, trails, and other green spaces, many of which surround the city’s neighborhoods. The city is also known for its arts, music, and cultural scene, as well as its many breweries. The continuous and notable population increase that Denver has experienced over the last few years has led to significant and steady rises in housing costs. The median cost of a home in this city is $363,984, which is higher than the U.S. average.

Congress Park (80206)

Congress Park is named for both the park itself as well as the charming, classic, and peaceful residential neighborhood that's conveniently located just a short 10-15 minute drive from downtown Denver. The Congress Park neighborhood is currently home to about 21,000 residents, many of whom are drawn to the area for its upscale, well-maintained homes, tree-lined streets, eclectic architectural charms, low crime rate, good quality of life, and small commercial strip that contains a handful of eateries and boutiques, all within close proximity to the hustle and bustle of Denver's city center. The residential area of Congress Park is largely made up of picturesque turn of the century homes, and the sprawling mansions on 7th avenue are architectural treasures. Residents of Congress Park are generally more affluent than those living in Denver as a whole (with a median income of $62,925 vs. $55,129) and tend to be less racially diverse (82% of people living in Congress Park are Caucasian). The neighborhood's schools are highly ranked, attracting many young families into the area. The average sale price of a home in Congress Park is $621,588.

South Park Hill (80220)

South Park Hill is a neighborhood about 3.5 miles east of downtown Denver. Niche's 2017 Best Places to Live Report highlighted South Park Hill as the number one best neighborhood in Denver and within the top 30 of all neighborhoods in the U.S. It's an attractive destination due to its beautiful architecture, neighborly vibe, close proximity to downtown, easy access to the Denver Zoo and City Park (Denver's largest and most popular park), and nice collection of independently owned bars, restaurants, and boutiques. Many young families are also drawn to the area for its exceptional schools. The neighborhood is incredibly bike friendly, so anybody hoping to make their cycling a primary mode of transportation will likely be very happy in this area. Just over 55,000 people live in South Park Hill, most of whom own a home versus renting (82% and 18%, respectively). Residents here earn an average of about $93,000 per year according to 2016 U.S. Census estimates (significantly higher than Denver's average income of $72,017). ## Platt Park (80210)

Platt Park is an urban neighborhood that's centrally located for easy access to many areas within the Denver region. It's about 4.5 miles south of downtown and provides a short, 15 minute commute for residents who live here. Its quaint central area – South Pearl Street (nicknamed “Old South Pearl”) – offers a plethora of restaurants, bars, markets, and boutiques along a beautiful, tree-lined street that was previously home to Denver's trolley line in the late 1800s. The historic homes in this area are a big draw for many of its residents. Most of the properties here were built before 1939, giving this neighborhood a higher proportion of historic residences than about 96% of all neighborhoods in the U.S. Platt Park is home to James H. Platt Park, a 17-acre urban park that offers plenty of green space and opportunities for outdoor activities to its residents and non-residents alike. Its proximity to Denver University, Washington Park, and the emerging South Broadway district in Overland makes this a neighborhood that is increasingly in high demand. The population of Platt Park is about 35,577. Most of its residents are college educated and have higher than average incomes. Homeowners in this area tend to spend, on average, about $578,626 on their homes, making this neighborhood more expensive than about 89% of the neighborhoods in Colorado. The vacancy rate for this area is about 4%, which means that the housing demand in Platt Park is notably higher than the supply (tighter than 83% of all neighborhoods in the U.S.).

Stapleton (80238)

If you're looking for big residential community, Stapleton is it. Stapleton is the largest urban redevelopment undertaking in the country and is located about 6 miles northeast of downtown (where the old airport used to be). Residents first began to move into the development in 2002, and the area now boasts a population of nearly 20,000 people with an expected future population of 30,000 residents in 12,000 homes. It's clear that Stapleton offers much in the way of community. Over its current 4,700 acres, it contains a whopping nine neighborhoods, fifty parks (including the 80-acre Central Park), nine schools, a handful of commercial and business districts, its own visitor center, and is tethered to the Denver metro region and the Denver International Airport via commuter rail line. The neighborhoods within Stapleton all stress their unique and individualized personalities and aesthetics, though Stapleton as a whole is generally considered to be mostly suburban in its overall vibe and its offerings. Stapleton is very family friendly, with its emphasis on abundant green spaces, well-lit streets, and top quality schools. The median home value in Stapleton is $535,788.

Southern California

The Southwest is one of the most diverse and dynamic regions in the U.S. Throughout this region, many first or second generation immigrants from all over the world – particularly Central and South America – have settled and built communities. On the California coast, Los Angeles and San Diego are two of the biggest cities in the country, filled with opportunity, creativity and a laid-back SoCal vibe. Las Vegas has its own unique character, a city defined by towering hotels and casinos, but containing so much more than that. Phoenix is a city that finds a way to flourish in the desert. These four cities are often known for their warm weather, and lately their housing markets have been heating up too.

Los Angeles

Bel Air / Manhattan Beach /
Malibu / Silver Lake

We probably all have our preconceived perceptions of Los Angeles, most likely involving some combination of sun, celebrities, and sandy beaches. Nicknamed the “City of Angels,” Los Angeles is a sprawling Southern California metropolis that has been the center of the nation’s film and television industry for many decades. It’s home to a plethora of iconic sites such as the Hollywood Sign, Universal Studios, Hollywood Boulevard, Grauman’s Chinese Theatre, Rodeo Drive, the Santa Monica Pier, and the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The Los Angeles metro area as whole is home to over 10 million people. L.A. beckons to young, entrepreneurial types as well as aspiring actors, writers, and directors, who come to the city to realize their dreams.

Almost 40 percent of residents are not originally from the area. Given that people regularly come from all over the world to experience life in Los Angeles, population diversity is one of the great hallmarks of this city, making categorization of a “typical” Angeleno nearly impossible. This great influx of people has unfortunately led to housing shortages, along with dramatically rising housing costs. According to the 2010 United States Census, there were about 1.5 million housing units in Los Angeles, of which 38% were owner-occupied and 62% were occupied by renters. People who live in the city love L.A. but might not love that the median home value is $714,935.

San Diego is a major U.S. city that’s located about 120 miles south of Los Angeles and about 17 miles north of the Mexican border. The city of San Diego is known for its balmy weather, beautiful beaches, universities, and military bases serving the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. It’s also becoming known for rapid home price appreciation, with some neighborhoods seeing 20% gains year-over-year.

The city is home to world-class universities like the University of California at San Diego and the University of San Diego, which enroll over 40,000 students combined every year.

People from elsewhere in California and the U.S. are drawn to San Diego due to its pleasing climate and ocean proximity – but also due to its strong economy. In 2014, Forbes designated San Diego as the best city in the U.S. to start a small business or startup. Currently, the city has an unemployment rate of just 3.3%, and the median household income for folks living in the metro area is about $66,529. Consequently, home prices are rising in almost every San Diego neighborhood, not just the ones near the beach or the universities. From Ocean Beach to Escondido, this has become a popular area to live. According to Unison’s Home Affordability Report, the median home price in the city of San Diego is $559,581.

San Diego Neighborhoods

Ocean Beach (92107)

A quintessential oceanfront neighborhood, Ocean Beach (known by the locals as just O.B.) features homes with gorgeous views just a short walk away from the mile-long stretch of sand and saltwater known as Ocean Beach. The neighborhood remains on the small side, with about 10,000 residents in the area. On any given day, the area is home to surfers, tourists, and locals. With restaurants and bars nearby, this could be considered a paradise to some hopeful homeowners. There is a year-round farmers market on Wednesday evenings and down on the water, lifeguards are often on duty for those who want to swim. There's even a designated dog beach at the North end. But all of this fun does come at a cost for home buyers, and the median price of a home in this area is now about $875,385.

North Park (92104)

This up-and-coming neighborhood is about 3 miles from San Diego's city center and a place that's loved by Millennials and young families alike. It was ranked among the top 20 of "America's Best Hipster Neighborhoods" by Forbes. North Park is a diverse area where there are plenty of cafes, diners, and bars nearby, not to mention classic Craftsman homes (and even more to come with the continuous development that seems to be happening in this area). You can sit down to Sunday brunch outdoors at West Coast Tavern, stroll to pick up a delicious ice cream cone at Hammonds, and then go watch live music at The Observatory. While this is not the most expensive neighborhood, it's still not cheap, given its median home values of about $626,541.

In 2014, Forbes designated San Diego as the best city in the U.S. to start a small business or startup. Currently, the city has an unemployment rate of just 3.3%, and the median household income for folks living here is about $66,529.

La Jolla

La Jolla is an upscale neighborhood located 12 miles north of San Diego's downtown. It is home to a University of California campus, pristine beaches, and the Torrey Pines Golf Course, where Tiger Woods famously won the U.S. Open in 2008. While the beach itself attracts tourists and locals who want to partake in swimming and surfing, a few blocks away La Jolla Village offers a variety of restaurants and shops that also draw people in. For most of the year, college students and professors make up a significant portion of La Jolla's population, but they're not the only ones who want to live in this idyllic location. According to U.S. Census Bureau estimates, La Jolla was home to about 46,781 people in 2010. Over the last few years, in particular, La Jolla has become a very desirable place for people to live, and as a result, the area is bringing in median home prices of over $1 million: a whopping $1,298,990 to be precise.

Escondido

Escondido is a community located approximately 30 miles north of San Diego proper. One of the oldest cities in the county, Escondido boasts similar amenities to many of the other San Diego neighborhoods – good weather, proximity to the ocean, restaurants, bars, art galleries, etc. – but with considerably lower home prices. The area has drawn folks in from near and far and has a population of approximately 150,000 people. In addition, Escondido is a great place for families. There are more than 20 elementary and middle schools in the city, which serve almost 20,000 school-aged children and their families. The most recent U.S. Census shows that 42% of households had children under 18 living with them. According to the Unison Home Affordability Report, the median Escondido home is more affordable (at a median value of about $461,838) than those in many San Diego neighborhoods.

Chula Vista

Located just south of the city of San Diego, Chula Vista (roughly translated as "beautiful view") is a diverse city that has been experiencing rapid growth in recent years. With an increasing population that is quickly approaching 300,000, downtown Chula Vista is highly walkable and features plenty of places to eat, shop, buy groceries, or simply sit while drinking your favorite hot beverage. On a lazy Sunday, have a breakfast feast at Aunt Emma's Pancake Restaurant and walk to Sweet Bakery Mexico Lindo for dessert. Or grab some coffee and read a book at Cool Down Coffee just a block away. Outside downtown, Chula Vista has more attractions which include a large amphitheater, a marina, and even an waterpark run by SeaWorld. There are quite a few neighborhoods within Chula Vista where home buyers can look for relatively good bargains. At about $476,859, the median home prices here are not as high as within the city of San Diego, but are still higher than many other U.S. cities.

Las Vegas

Henderson / Boulder City /
Summerlin South / Mesquite

What happens in Vegas stays in... well, you know the saying. This city occupies a unique place in the American psyche as the embodiment of carefree fun, memorable late nights, big shows, beautiful casinos, and well-earned hangovers. Some have called Las Vegas the entertainment capital of the world, and while that's up for debate, one thing is not: this city holds much more than just "The Strip" where high-rise hotels and casinos loom large. While the Las Vegas Strip is indeed where people flock for gambling, shopping, fine dining, concerts, and 24-hour nightlife, there is more here than meets the eye. In terms of hospitality, the city is definitely a leader. It has more AAA Five Diamond hotels than any other city in the world and is a leading destination for all types of conventions. It is also one of the most popular cities in the world to get married, with around 100,000 weddings performed here every year.

Las Vegas is located in the Mojave Desert and is bordered on all sides by beautiful, majestic mountain ranges. Typical of other areas in the Mojave Desert, residents of Las Vegas generally experience a pretty hot desert climate. Summers here can get very hot and dry, while winters are generally pretty mild. For locals who want to avoid the tourist traps, there is still plenty to do here. Las Vegas has 68 parks, many museums, a downtown arts district, an NHL team, the University of Nevada Las Vegas, and the College of Southern Nevada. And many folks are particularly excited about the arrival of the NFL's Raiders to Las Vegas, where they will make their home starting in 2020.

Las Vegas is the most populated city in Nevada, with about 583,756 residents whose median age is 34 years and median household income is $52,629. The median home value in Las Vegas is $220,979.

Las Vegas Neighborhoods

Henderson

Henderson is the second largest city in Nevada (behind Las Vegas) and is located about 16 miles southeast of Las Vegas. It offers many of the opportunities associated with a vibrant, stimulating, high quality of life community, minus a good deal of the showiness and glitz of the Las Vegas scene. In Henderson, one can find a number of large shopping malls, cinemas, music venues, an outdoor amphitheater, restaurants, more than 37 miles of trails, and even a fair number of casinos. Henderson is also proud to house Nevada's only scenic Bird Preserve and the state's largest recreational center. Henderson's location in the Mojave Desert provides the city with plenty of desert landscape, desert wildlife, and even volcanic rock from an explosion that occurred millions of years ago. There are many residential neighborhoods within Henderson that provide a level of peace, safety, and tranquility that draw people from near and far. In fact, Henderson was rated as "America's 2nd Safest City" by Forbes magazine in 2011, and was also chosen as one of the "Best Cities to Live in America" by Bloomberg Businessweek. Henderson is estimated to have a population of 292,969 and a median household income of $64,277 according to 2016 U.S. Census estimates. Interestingly, one of the neighborhoods within Henderson (MacDonald Highlands) boasts the seventh highest per-capita income in the U.S. The median home value here is $272,724.

Boulder City

Boulder City is a moderately sized, rural region located about 26 miles south of Las Vegas. It's a popular region for retirees (the median age of the population here is 47 years) and is likely best known for its close proximity to the historic Hoover Dam. The city contains a handful of golf courses, hiking trails, racquetball courts, and other recreational facilities. Boulder City is a relatively quiet community, where a majority of the homes are owned versus rented (68% and 32%, respectively). But perhaps the most significant reason for the serenity associated with this city results from the fact that Boulder City prohibits gambling within its boundaries (one of the only two cities in Nevada to do so). Boulder City's population as of 2016 was 15,373, making it the 12th largest community in Nevada. The median household income estimates are $52,629 according to the 2016 U.S. Census, and the median home value is $265,040.

Summerlin South (89135)

For those who like to live among the “upper crust” of society, the neighborhood of Summerlin South might just be the place. Summerlin South is often referred to as one of the most elite areas within the state as well as the country. The neighborhood is home to about 25,919 people. People have been attracted to this area for the upscale lifestyle and amenities that it offers and the family-friendly environment. The area offers a number of expansive parks, recreational facilities, golf courses, and community centers, as well as a very large shopping mall in the downtown area. The Summerlin South community is actually governed by the Summerlin South Community Association, which acts as both the primary governmental agency and homeowner’s association for all of the neighborhood’s residents. It’s located, not surprisingly, just south of the city of Summerlin, another master-planned community. Home values in all of Summerlin South have experienced notable appreciation in recent years. Summerlin South’s median housing value is $363,543.

Mesquite

Mesquite is a medium-sized (and growing!) city that’s located about 80 miles northeast of Las Vegas and sits adjacent to the Arizona state border. It’s been getting quite a bit of press lately due to its notable population growth and economic development over the past few years. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, Mesquite was a small town of only about 800 people back in 1983. But between 2000 and 2016, the population numbers have grown to nearly 18,000. Many members of this community have come to Mesquite to retire, and the average age of residents here is about 53 years old. A portion of Mesquite’s population growth has resulted from people coming to enjoy the year-round warmer climate of this area during the winter months. Other factors include the town’s proximity to Utah and Arizona, along with its lower property taxes, lower crime rates, lower cost of living, and general peace and quiet that can’t easily be found in Las Vegas. Mesquite also boasts a number of casino resorts, a new library that’s under construction, new shops and businesses, and a new sports complex containing a baseball field, soccer field, volleyball court, and basketball court. With all of this development, some are calling Mesquite the new “Little Vegas.” If this sounds like the destination for you, you can expect to shell out about $206,807 for a home here.

Phoenix

Coronado/Garfield / Sunnyslope /
Scottsdale / Chandler

As the primary metro area in the state of Arizona, Phoenix (which is also the state capital) draws in many residents from other regions of the U.S. who are looking for a dry, warm climate. In fact, the city offers the most annual sunshine that you can find anywhere in the world (3,872 hours and 300 days of sunshine per year!), along with infamously scorching hot summer temperatures (which actually drive people to get out of the city on certain days).

But Phoenix offers more than just sunny days and warm nights. This area is home to a wide array of entertainment and dining options, along with awesome recreational activities, sports teams, cultural offerings, a low cost of living, and desirable job opportunities. Oh, and golf courses. Many, many golf courses. More than 200, in fact. Perhaps it's the golf courses, perhaps it's any one of the other categories of great amenities provided by this city, but Phoenix is drawing in people at an increasing rate. Some are young professionals escaping the expensive housing markets on the West Coast, others are retirees from the East Coast looking for a high quality of life. Phoenix brings people from all over.

With a population of just over 1.5 million, Phoenix is a hot (pun intended!) city that has some exceptionally desirable and affordable neighborhoods that entice people from near and far. The Phoenix metro area (aka "The Valley") contains a great variety of unique and exciting neighborhoods, each with its own personality and vibe. And many of these are still affordable. According to Unison's Home Affordability Report, the median price for a home in Phoenix is $203,777.

Coronado/Garfield (85006)

The Coronado neighborhood (aka Greater Coronado) is located in midtown Phoenix and, according to 2016 estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau, boasts a population of nearly 28,000 people. It is comprised of three historic districts: Country Club Park, Brentwood, and Coronado. This neighborhood is home to buildings that well-represent 1920s and 1930s architecture, and residents here enjoy living within that slice of history. Also enticing is the fact that the Coronado neighborhood is located in close proximity to major freeways and the light rail, as well as downtown Phoenix and the central corridor. There has been a recent resurgence and quite a bit of growth in this neighborhood, including among families and young professionals as well as artists and musicians. Many have flocked to this neighborhood because it offers its residents the opportunity to be part of a close knit community at fairly affordable prices. According to Unison's Home Affordability Report, the median home price for this zip code is $234,152.

Sunnyslope (85020)

You know you've reached Sunnyslope when you see the iconic and historic "S" painted on the side of Sunnyslope Mountain. Sunnyslope is a 9-square-mile neighborhood within Phoenix that offers a distinctively small-town vibe and strong community identity. In fact, Sunnyslope tried (and failed) on four occasions to separate from the city of Phoenix and to become its own city. Residents of Sunnyslope (of which there are about 45,000) have the luxury of taking in amazing views of North Mountain, especially at sunset along East Foothill Drive, where their backyards meet the craggy greenstone hills. They also can be found biking along the popular Arizona Canal Path and then grabbing a brew at the town's local brewery, North Mountain Brewing. Unison's Home Affordability Report notes the median home price for this zip code at $245,598.

Scottsdale

This suburb north of Phoenix is well-known for being an affluent and upscale neighborhood that doubles as a first-class tourist destination. In fact, it plays host to approximately 5 million overnight visitors per year, according to the City of Scottsdale, which is why tourism makes up a significant share of the city's economy. When you see the type of amenities available here, it's not hard to understand why people want to come visit. There are plenty of golf courses, resorts, spas, nightclubs, nice restaurants, and beautiful desert views to go around. For residents, the area is attractive due to its spacious homes, good schools, and proximity to all that Phoenix has to offer. While it is more expensive to buy a home here than in other nearby neighborhoods, residents believe it is well worth it for the quality of life. Unison's Home Affordability Report notes the median home price is $424,901.

Chandler

Named after its founder, Dr. Alexander John Chandler, this suburb may not be quite as diverse or as economically dynamic as the city of Phoenix itself, but it has a lot to offer. There are few large employers in this area including Intel (the computer-chip industry leader), which has two campuses and recently announced a multi-billion dollar development project in the area. With employers like these putting down roots here, it's no wonder Chandler was named the #1 city to find a job in 2018 by Wallet Hub. For recreation, residents of this city like to stroll around the Phoenix Premium Outlets located in West Chandler, attend the annual Ostrich Festival (which celebrates the city's history), or get outdoors. Chandler has a number of good schools and offers relatively affordable homes. Unison's Home Affordability Report notes the median home price is $277,214.
